Deadline for Next Issue April 1, 1996

A Message from the Alumni Director

Happy 1996 High Pointers!

Hope the new year is off to a great start for each one of you. To bring you up to date, the following tidbits are but a few things we accomplished last year...

Fact: The Office of Alumni Relations, in conjunction with the Development office hosted 20 alumni events in 1995.

Fact: Homecoming 1995 brought together 1,000+ alumni and current students for the traditional Homecoming dance held at Market Square.

Fact: The first-ever Grand Luncheon was held during Homecoming 1995. Alumni attendance soared over 250.

Fact: Six reunion classes combined fund-raising efforts and raised approximately $25,000 in the University's first attempt to establish a reunion giving program.

Fact: October of 1995 the University held its first regional campaign outside High Point. Under the direction of the Development Office, the Charlotte Campaign raised over $500,000 in three months for the Founders Campaign.

As you can tell, we have been quite busy since the July 1995 issue of the magazine. To those of you who have helped to make these facts a reality, please accept our appreciation and thanks. The success of the University's programs is a result of your participation and support. Keep up the good work High Pointers!

The year of 1996 promises to be as challenging. Continue to keep your eyes and ears open to our call. When we come to your area for an alumni event, come out and support it. When you receive Homecoming 1996 letters of interest, make plans to attend. When your telephone rings during the months of October and November, remember to send your contributions to the Alumni Loyalty Fund. When you move, marry, or receive a job promotion, contact the Alumni Relations Office so we can update our files. There are so many ways you can be involved with your alma mater. As Nike says, "Just Do It!"

One other point of interest I would like to share with you is on the topic of intercollegiate athletics. Recently, I was appointed to serve on an ad hoc committee to explore possible intercollegiate opportunities for High Point University. Along those lines, I would like to hear from you regarding the addition or deletion of current or future athletic programs. Do we offer the right mix of athletics? Is there something you would like to see added? Would you be willing to support our athletic program financially? If we added a program, for example football, would you attend more athletic functions? Is there a need to change our current athletic program?

Please contact the Alumni Relations Office by telephone, 910-841-9126, or by fax, 910-841-4599 with your thoughts and ideas. You may also write your concerns to us. Whatever the case may be, we need to hear from you.

As I approach the completion of my second year of service, I look forward with great anticipation to another year serving you and High Point University.

May 1996 bring joy, happiness and prosperity to you and your family!

High Point University Adds Two Degrees

High Point University has added two bachelor of science degrees as of the 1995-96 academic year. One degree is in sports management and the other in exercise science.

The Department of Exercise, Sport Studies, and Physical Education identified the need for such changes. As a result of the university's relatively new Sports Medicine Program receiving accreditation from the American Medical Association, and the heightening interest and need for qualified individuals to work the broad area of sports management, this field began to open up in the late 1970s, grew extensively in the '80s, and continues to grow in the '90s, according to Woody Gibson, assistant professor and director of the new degree program in sports management.

The new degree is possible through an interdisciplinary program that is the result of cooperation between the Earl N. Phillips School of Business and the Department of Exercise Science, Sport Studies, and Physical Education. The latter department's name changed from Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation to reflect accurately courses offered.

Development of the degree included integrating existing courses and adding the new course, Introduction to Sports Management. Requirements for the sports management degree include successful completion of 23 credit hours in sport studies and physical education courses, eighteen credit hours in business courses and nine credit hours in courses in related fields.

The sports management degree will prepare individuals for careers in business and administration of sport facilities management, and the management of sport, according to Dr. Charlie Q. Futrell, professor and chair of the Department of Exercise Science, Sport Studies, and Physical Education. Possible employment opportunities in the field of sports include professional sports teams, intercollegiate athletic programs, high school athletic programs, private sports clubs, sports marketing firms, sports consulting firms, and various amateur sports organizations.

In his role as program director, Gibson also will serve as an academic advisor to students who are in the program, monitor practicum and internship experiences, and teach a newly added course, introduction to sports management.

Gibson had four years experience working in professional basketball before employment at High Point University in 1980. He has worked extensively in sport promotion, sports information, and sports administration. Gibson completed his doctor of education degree in September 1995.

Exercise Science major introduced

The addition of the exercise science major in the department is for students interested in graduate studies in exercise science.

Rick L. Proctor '79, associate professor, who is director for the Sports Medicine Program, says that students who study exercise science can have various career plans. They are interested in fields of exercise such as physical therapy (PT), physiology, or kinesiology (the science of movement as it pertains to exercise).

High Point's pre-professional program in physical therapy prepares individuals to apply for physical therapy school upon successful completion of High Point's program.

David Holt

Lay Person of the Year

Being named Lay Person of the Year by Main Street United Methodist Church was both an honor and surprise to long time member, alumnus, and former registrar at High Point University, David Holt '55.

"I was very surprised and honored," Holt said. He said being nominated by his Sunday School class made the award even more precious. "I felt so honored to have a group of people around me who thought that much of me," Holt said.

In their nomination to the Western North Carolina Conference Council on Laity, the Christian Fellowship Sunday School Class cited Holt's many volunteer activities and tireless dedication as reasons for his nomination. Some of his church activities include 30 years as the teacher of the Sunday School class, 25 years of making coffee for all adults in the church on Sunday mornings, and service on various administrative boards. Holt has also devoted 25 years to the Main Street United Methodist Church Boy Scout troop.

He has spent many years in service to his community. He was an alderman on Kernersville's town council for six two-year terms. He is an active member of the Kernersville Lions Club and spends countless hours beautifying Kernersville with his fragrant and colorful flowers. The flowers are what give Holt the most pleasure. "I am proud of the flowers," Holt said modestly. Holt credits his mother with his green thumb and love of gardening.

His family is another source of pride for Holt. He and his wife, Helen, have two daughters, Anne and Beth, and a granddaughter, Katie, who is six. "We are very pleased with our daughters and their accomplishments," Holt said. Holt's parents, who live in Asheboro, are a very important part of his life. "My father will soon be ninety; they have been married sixty-eight years," he said with pride.

Since his retirement from High Point University, Holt has been able to share more time with his parents. "They are totally independent, but they need some help. I have been spending much time with them," Holt said.

Holt credits his wife, Helen, with much of his success, both professionally and as a volunteer. "My wife gets much credit for anything I've done. We are sort of a team," he said.

Jacob C. Martinson, president of High Point University, nominated Holt for Lay Person of the Year. Holt taught and served as registrar for the last 34 years at High Point University. In nominating Holt, Martinson said, "I have never had an opportunity to know a finer churchman than Dave Holt. He is a great man and a truly good man."

Although Holt retired as registrar in May of 1994, he says he is busier than ever. "I really did not retire. I just changed my priorities," he said, laughing. "There just are not enough hours in the day!"

Even after being named Lay Person of the Year, Holt does not want to rest on his laurels. "This will not change me! Be a doer — that has always been my philosophy," he said. "If you want to have the flowers, you have to plant the seed."

New Faculty Additions

Eight full-time faculty members began teaching at High Point University when the fall semester began August 23. Included in this group are the following:

Guy M. Arcuri, assistant professor of Spanish, who most recently was a visiting assistant professor of Spanish at Wake Forest University, received his Ph.D. in curriculum and instruction from UNC-Chapel Hill; an M.A.T. (teaching) degree from UNC-CH; and a B.A. from North Carolina State University (both the M.A.T. and B.A. are in Spanish language and literature);

Linda N. Curtis, assistant professor of biology, who was an assistant professor at Elon College, earned her Ph.D. from UNC-Chapel Hill; an M.A. degree and B.A. from UNC-Greensboro (all her degrees are in biology);

Richard M. Hargrove, assistant professor of business administration, most recently taught buyer-seller communication at The University of Mississippi, where he received his Ph.D. in marketing in August 1995. He received an M.B.A. in management from the University of Southern Mississippi and a B.A. in anthropology from Tulane University;

Matthew W. Kirkhart, instructor of psychology, who was assistant director of the Psychology Clinic at UNC-Greensboro, is working toward a Ph.D. in psychology. He received an M.A. degree and B.A. from West Virginia University (both are in psychology);

Jean-Francois Llorens, assistant professor of French, who taught at Southern Methodist University at Dallas, received a Ph.D. from the University of Massachusetts; an M.A. from Univerite de Paris I Sorbonne (France); and a B.A. from Institut de 'Etudes Politiques d'Aix en Provence (France);

Heidi Kent Summey, assistant professor of special education, has been a full-time student with a teaching assistantship in the department of Curriculum and Instruction at UNC-Greensboro. She received a Ph.D. from UNC-G in August 1995. Her M.A. degree is from Appalachian State University and B.S. from Greensboro College;

Dan Tarara, instructor of sports medicine was a graduate assistant at Purdue University and clinical instructor in athletic training. He received an M.S. degree in health, kinesiology and leisure studies; exercise physiology from Purdue University this year, and a B.S. from Springfield College in athletic training; and William L. Conley, associate professor of business administration, who was an associate professor of business at Pfeiffer College, received a Ph.D. from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln; M.B.A. degree from Morehead State University, Kentucky; and B.S.C. from the University of Louisville.

Hello Mayberry

Terry Collins '89 recently published an illustrated biography of Andy Griffith. Upon graduation from High Point University, Terry went on to become an award-winning newspaper reporter and columnist. Today, he is a free-lance writer best known for his critically acclaimed work in the comics industry on such titles as Elfquest, Doc Savage, and The Ren and Stimpy Show. Terry was on campus during Parent's Weekend in November of 1995. He held a book signing in the Campus Bookstore. A pop culture collector and historian, Terry shares Andy Griffith's Mount Airy, North Carolina birthplace. He continues to make his home there with his wife, Ginny.

ALSO IN THE NEWS...

Samantha K. Dutton, of High Point, is now the director of student accounts at High Point University. Dutton received a B.S. degree in business administration and accounting in 1992 and is a member of Delta Mu Delta honorary business society. She has been an accounting assistant in the business office since June 1992 and filled the director of student accounts vacancy shortly after the death of Ann Register in June.

WE SALUTE OUR HIGH POINT UNIVERSITY GRADUATES!!

Craig Curty is the new assistant director of the Learning Assistance Center. He graduated in 1993 and holds a B.A. degree in history and comes to High Point from Westfield YMCA where he was a teacher. Craig was Tutor of the Year in his senior year at High Point University. As assistant director of the Learning Assistance Center (LAC), he is responsible for managing the center's tutorial staff, including organizing, overseeing, and scheduling tutors and lab assistants. At the Learning Assistance Center in Smith Library, arrangements for one-on-one tutoring in all subjects at all academic levels are available. Services also include assistance with study skills, time management, test-taking, and word processing.

Around Campus...

Edward P. Cannady, director of public safety at High Point University, received the L.E. Moody Service Award announced annually at the school's honors day program.

Alpha Phi Omega presented the award. Alpha Phi Omega is a national service fraternity with men and women members at High Point University. The award honors Moody. He was "a professor, advisor, friend, and example for all at High Point University to follow," according to the fraternity records.

The main reason stated for Cannady's selection is his willingness to help at a moment's notice, no matter what the task, exemplifying the principles of leadership and service.

Cannady has been employed in the Safety Office at High Point University for 14 years. He retired in 1980 from the Durham Police Department, where he was director of communications, and he served in the United States Air Force from 1952 to 1962. Cannady's present-day service to the High Point community includes leading prayer services at a local nursing home. He holds membership in the Kentucky Colonels (a service organization) and is an adviser to Delta Sigma Phi fraternity on the High Point campus.

Former Faculty Member Receives Recognition

Dr. Carl M. Wheeless, former department chair and professor of history and political science from 1971-1986, published a book entitled Landmarks of American Presidents. He spent ten years working on this compilation of historical sites associated with the U.S. presidents. During the past several years, he has logged more than 20,000 miles on his car researching presidential landmarks.

The book contains over 200 photographs and line drawings. This book is the most comprehensive compendium of historical sites associated with the 41 United States presidents ever published. Landmarks of American Presidents fills the gap on a high interest area of history and travel, never available before in one convenient resource.

Arranged chronologically by president's name, each illustrated chapter provides a presidential portrait and begins with a brief introduction to the president, establishing context for the landmarks that follow. Important U.S. and foreign sites associated with each president are in 11 major sections and include birthplace, educational institutions, homes and lodgings, and more.

MORE ON AUTHORS...

Also of interest is published faculty member Dr. Richard B. McCaslin. In 1994 he published Remembered Be Thy Blessings: The College Years 1924-1991. Dr. McCaslin's book describes and details High Point University's college years from 1924 to 1991. This book contains insightful accounts of the events and the individuals responsible for shaping the University to what it is today.

You will also view never before published photographs. Additionally, appendices listing many vital statistics of the College from 1924 to 1991 are in this very interesting book.

It will provide several hours of captivating reading and is a perfect gift idea for birthdays or special occasions. The book is $19.95, plus shipping and handling. You may order this book by contacting the Office for Institutional Advancement (910) 841-9127. If you live in the High Point/Triad area, you can purchase from Will's or One for the Books; both located in High Point. This is a book that you and your family will want to add to your permanent library.

Nominations for Alumni Board

The Nominating Committee of the Alumni Association Board of Directors is currently accepting nominations for two new board members. New board member terms begin June 1996 and continue through May 1999. Please submit names in writing or by telephone to the Alumni Relations Office (910) 841-9126, fax (910) 841-4599. The Alumni Board is an advisory board serving as a liaison between alumni and the University. The board of directors meets on campus four times a year.

A Status Report from the Education Department

- According to a recent report from the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction in Raleigh, 862 High Point University graduates currently hold licenses and teach, or work in administrative positions, in the public schools of North Carolina.

- Of the 862 High Point University graduates, 317 hold Master's degrees.

- Of the 862 graduates, 15 hold doctorates.

- Four school superintendents are graduates of High Point University:

Dr. Bob Gordon '65	Asheboro City Schools
Mr. Worth Hatley '66	Randolph County Schools
Dr. Gene Riddle '58	Moore County Schools
Dr. Jim Surratt '65	Wake County/Raleigh Schools

- Forty High Point University graduates are principals or have central office positions in the public schools of North Carolina.

Keep up the great work, High Point University teachers!

And also...

Chapter Four of The Professional Preparation of Middle Level Teachers: Profiles of Successful Programs is by Warren G. (Bill) Anderson, Distinguished Lecturer at High Point University, and Dr. Dennis G. Carroll, associate professor and chair of the Education Department. This is a new book focusing on the preparation of teachers for middle grades. National Middle School Association published the book.

Emphasis in the chapter was on High Point University's developmental model for Teacher Education and the vast number of field experiences students receive before entering into the final semester of full-time student teaching.

If you thought these "old-timers" were old, think again because these are not your regular "old-timers"! During Homecoming 1995, an alumni basketball scrimmage was held to bring back those superstars from days you remember as a student. These former players still have what it takes to play round ball. Sorry you missed out on the slam dunks and fast breaks this year. It is to be hoped that you will join us Homecoming 1996 for the alumni basketball scrimmage! The Office of Alumni Relations plans to host an alumni basketball scrimmage every year during Homecoming. Please try to be a part of this event. If you are interested in playing, please give us a call.

A Decade of Accomplishment

What a difference a decade makes.

When Dr. Jacob Martinson became president in 1985, High Point College had been through some difficult days: morale was bad, enrollment was down, the physical plant was in disrepair, the residence halls were in dire need of maintenance, and Roberts Hall was a relic of the past.

Today, the university is not only a jewel in the community's crown, but is also gaining a national reputation. During Dr. Martinson's tenure, enrollment has doubled, the endowment has tripled, and the physical plant has been transformed. The following developments illustrate the progress:

- A completely renovated Roberts Hall, the oldest building on campus, has recaptured its past glory.
- High Point College became High Point University in October 1991.
- The Millis Athletic/Convocation Center, which opened in 1992, boasts a 2,500-seat arena, an aerobics center, classrooms, racquetball courts, the sports medicine center, and an eight-lane Olympic swimming pool.
- Finch Hall, a men's residence hall, was constructed, and women's residence halls were renovated.
- The Winston-Salem campus was established with three separate building programs.
- Graduate programs in business were launched.
- Most noticeably, Montlieu Avenue, which intersected the campus, was rerouted, paving the way for future campus improvements, including the Fine Arts Center, on which construction will begin in the near future.

"More has been accomplished in these

10 years than in the previous 25 or 30," says George Erath, Sr., '52, chairman of the university's board of trustees.

Not surprisingly, Dr. Martinson has been applauded for ushering in this progress. He is quick, however, to share the credit.

"Some wonderful things have happened under this administration," he says. "But this is a cooperative enterprise, involving students, faculty, staff and board of trustees. I see myself as a facilitator."

Dr. Martinson earned a bachelor's degree from Huntingdon College, a masters degree in divinity from Duke Divinity School and a doctorate from Vanderbilt University. Nevertheless, he admits, "there's no book or class that will make you an effective college administrator. One has to look at all sides of issues and assume authority."

When he took the helm of High Point University in 1985, Dr. Martinson had

High Point University
will "always remain value-centered, so young people leave here better than when they came."

already served as president of Brevard College in North Carolina (1976-85) and Andrew College in Georgia (1972-76). Before entering academia, he honed his leadership skills pastoring United Methodist churches, some with dozens of employees and with congregations in the thousands.

Still preaching many sermons each year, he recently returned to his Winter Park, Fla., congregation to mark the church's 110th anniversary.

"Countless people stood in line to shake hands," he says. "It was a real thrill."

At High Point University, however, one need not endure a sermon or stand on ceremony to talk with Dr. Martinson. On the contrary, an open-door policy and a down-to-earth willingness to listen characterize his administration. And though the grandfather clock in his office persistently ticks, Dr. Martinson makes time for those who need a few minutes.

Dr. Morris Wray, the university's vice president for internal affairs, also worked with Dr. Martinson at Andrew and Brevard colleges.

"Jake is a team builder who empowers his staff by working with them to create a vision of the future while avoiding micro-management," says Dr. Wray. "Students, faculty and staff who visit his office leave energized."

Dr. Martinson is a modest man, but he prides himself on people-smarts: "Knowing whom to hire, what to look for in staff is the secret to leadership. ... We have a superb staff. Everyone does the best possible job."

Raised on a Wisconsin dairy farm, he profited from the advice of his father, a man of impeccable integrity and a diehard Franklin Roosevelt supporter. Dr. Martinson later found role models at Duke Divinity School.

"One or two professors took me under their wings and would occasionally invite me to a concert or out to dinner," he remembers. "They taught me the meaning of respect and honor and character, and I never wanted to let them down."

Interestingly, he almost didn't attend divinity school. Aspiring to become a physician, he reached the door of Duke's medical school and turned back, instead answering a call to the ministry.

"I first thought of being a minister when I was eight, but I didn't let anyone know about it until I was 18," he says, smiling.

For Dr. Martinson, Duke University proved not only to be an ideal place to study theology but to meet his life mate as well. His former Duke roommate introduced him to Elizabeth "Libby" Smathers, a preacher's daughter. On their first date, Dr. Martinson barely scraped together enough change to pay for their dinner at a local hamburger joint.

Their relationship survived those lean times. And after 33 years of marriage and raising two daughters — Elizabeth, an attorney; and Kirsten, a doctoral candidate in psychology — the couple is still dining together. Breakfast, in particular, is a ritual in the their household.

"We always eat breakfast together and have a second cup of coffee together,"

Dr. Martinson says. "We read the paper. We talk current events. It's one of the few peaceful times in the home. At night everyone is going a different direction."

The hours in between find the Martinsons working as a team on the university's behalf. Of his wife's contributions, Dr. Martinson says, "She's as good a development officer as we have. She is the best public relations officer for this institution."

A classically trained pianist, Libby Martinson long ago devoted her energies to supporting her husband's endeavors. And she relishes her role as first lady.

"I've been given absolute freedom to do whatever I want," she says.

Although she has no job description, Mrs. Martinson fulfills many official roles and even more informal duties, from hostess and ambassador to cheerleader. Sometimes she even acts as mother hen, showing concern when members of the campus community are ill. And she periodically pops in on faculty, students and staff.

"I learn things from these contacts that might not otherwise reach Jake's office," she explains.

Mrs. Martinson is also in touch with the community, having served on boards and committees of organizations such as the High Point Area Arts Council and High Point Chamber of Commerce.

Occasionally, she spearheads community outreach projects at the university. A few years ago, for example, she coordinated a choral festival that attracted 400 singers from 52 churches and choirs. She also coordinated a program that sent education majors to tutor local elementary school students in reading. Now administered by Dr. Mariann Tillery in the university's education department, this highly successful program receives funding from the local school system.

Like her husband, Mrs. Martinson enjoys making things happen and witnessing growth.

"We're in a visionary university community where ideas turn into concrete scholarships and programs," she says.

Such growth has been spurred by successful fund-raising efforts. The latest, the Founders Campaign, which culminates with the university's 75th anniversary in 1999, is already halfway toward achieving its $41 million goal.

Those funds have been earmarked for new student housing, a new classroom facility, expansions of Haworth Hall and the Winston-Salem campus, and renovations to Cooke Hall and the Campus Center. Faculty development, undergraduate and graduate scholarships, acquisition of library holdings, and graduate studies are also funding priorities.

The largest project planned, however, is a spectacular, domed fine arts building, which Dr. Martinson predicts will help the city attract new business.

"The Fine Arts Center," he says, "will be a great asset to the community."

Local philanthropists apparently agree. A $2 million contribution for the new Fine Arts Center from Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hayworth represented a generous vote of confidence to the university and community.

Dr. Martinson, a seasoned fund-raiser, says he inherited sales savvy from his mother. A past chairman of the High Point Chamber of Commerce, he leverages contacts well, convincing leading executives to come to bat for the university. For example, in 1989 he enlisted NationsBank Chairman and CEO Hugh McColl to head the National Commission on the Future of High Point College.

"Jake relates to all types of people very, very well," says Richard Budd, '63, a member of the university's board of trustees." He can counsel a student, discuss academics with a professor and at the same time deal effectively with the community, trustees, alumni and potential donors."

Over the years, says Dr. Martinson,

"More has been accomplished in these 10 years than in the previous 25 or 30" university fund-raisers have shifted their methods and appeals.

"Rather than going to people with our hands out, we show them what's going on here and what our dreams are," he says. "We're asking donors, in essence, to join us in our dreams. We offer opportunities!"

Dr. Martinson dreams big. He envisions several schools and deans under the university's umbrella, more graduate programs, a larger faculty with the same high standards, and even more graduates who assume positive leadership in the world. These dreams, he believes, are well within reach.

"He has great insight into what he thinks the future should be," says board chairman George Erath. "He sets goals and then he does everything he can to accomplish them."

Indeed, a graduate school of education is under consideration; 65 percent of faculty hold doctorates or other terminal degrees; and specific courses and inter-curricular efforts are sharpening students' writing and speaking skills.

Beyond academics, however, Dr. Martinson hopes students learn to build relationships and order their values. Such life lessons, he says, reflect "what's important and what's all important."

Dr. Martinson applauds today's students as "the best I've ever had the privilege of serving. They have a better sense of direction. They're brighter and do a better job of thinking for themselves."

He is equally proud of the board and faculty, whom he says, "have worked together to make this a first-class school."

Inauguration Day, April 19, 1986

Dr. Martinson gives alumni high marks, too.

"As universities go, we're relatively young. Yet, we've turned out some of the finest people anywhere: doctors, lawyers, ministers, a governor, a U.S. Senator. . . even college presidents," he adds with a smile.

"Dr. Martinson frequently encourages students to 'leave High Point better than they found it,' says Dr. Wray. "He practices what he preaches in that regard, and he expects every person who works here to do the same."

Now, an annual award named in Dr. Martinson's honor will recognize recent alumni for community involvement, philanthropy and service to the university. The inaugural Martinson Merit Award will be awarded in October 1996 to a 1981 graduate. The prestigious award, however, not only borrows the Martinson's name, but also has their blessing.

"Alumni," he says, "have been some of our most enthusiastic supporters. They know what we have here, what it's done for them, what's going to happen in the future and that the best days of this institution are ahead." Alumni donors, he indicates, are "in on an appreciating stock. The stock of this school is going to get better and better."

Dr. Martinson should know. For 10 years, he has invested his intellect, energies and hopes into High Point University. And the institution is richer and more vibrant as a result.

"The steady improvement," says Mr. Erath, "enhances the value of your degree."

Says Mrs. Martinson, "We're taking a very exciting ride here."

That ride is far from over. Dr. Martinson's contract was recently extended through 1999, ensuring him a chance to bring even more dreams to fruition.

If he has his way, the university will have a mile-long waiting list, but still not become elitist. Most importantly, says Dr. Martinson, it will "always remain value-centered, so young people leave here better than when they came."

Like his students, Dr. Martinson is also on a journey. The only American ever named an honorary fellow of England's Westminster College, he remains his own toughest critic. Ever striving, he says in a self-effacing manner, "I'm not nearly the leader I want to be." That attitude fuels his ascent to excellence.

Avid hikers, Jake and Libby Martinson have trekked across mountains from western North Carolina to Switzerland. But no plateau compares to the summit they have reached at this institution.

The Crowning of the King and Queen

H O M E C O M I N G 1 9 9 5

This year's Homecoming celebration ended with a very successful dance held at Market Square, on Saturday, October 6, 1995. With the band playing great tunes and the crowd enjoying the atmosphere, it was time to crown the king and queen.

President Martinson did the honors of presenting the winners with their prizes. April Sides, of High Point, was this year's queen. April is a junior and majoring in English. Keith Anderson, Student Government President, was this year's king. Anderson, of Niceville, Fl., is a senior religion and philosophy major.

1995 Alumnus of the Year

William G. (Bill) Ervin '52 received the Alumnus of the Year Award from the Alumni Association, during this year's Homecoming celebration. Mary Lisabeth Strowd, Director of Development, presented this year's award. She commented, "Bill is willing to step up to talk about High Point University at any given time, at any given place, at any given moment."

Ervin, senior vice president of BB&T-Ervin-Haywood, Rankin Insurance Agency, is a native of Statesville and has lived in High Point since graduation. He is a former member of the High Point University Board of Visitors, member of the Panther Club, and has been active in past university fund-raising efforts. Currently, he is a volunteer for the university's current Founders Campaign.

He serves his church, his profession, and the community and has volunteered for at least 25 various organizations and served many of them as president, chair, and treasurer. At Wesley Memorial United Methodist, he has been finance chair and chair of the stewardship committee. He was also a member of the founding board and president for the United Methodist Agency for Retarded Children-Western North Carolina Conference.

Ervin has also volunteered for the Association of Retarded Citizens and was national vice president and president of the High Point and North Carolina groups. He served the YMCA of High Point as board chair and membership drive chair. He was president of the Salvation Army Boys and Girls Club. He has been a member of the Guilford County Mental Health and the Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Board. A member of the High Point Rotary Club, Ervin chairs its scholarship committee. He will be the 1996 campaign chair for the United Way of Greater High Point.

Some of Ervin's honors include receiving the Man and Youth Award of the Salvation Army Boys and Girls Club in 1988. Also, in 1990, he received the National Boys Club of America Medallion. Ervin won the High Point College American Humanics Friend to Youth Award. In 1993, he accepted the Independent Insurance Agent Award.

Ervin is on the board of trustees at Brevard College, where he graduated (two-year school) before attending High Point University. He is member of the Business Advisory Board at Appalachian State University. He served as president of the Independent Insurance Agents of North Carolina. Additionally, he served on and chaired a variety of committees on the state level. He is a leader in his profession's organizations regionally and locally. In 1964 he earned the Chartered Property & Casualty Underwriter designation, (CPCU), and in 1970 the Risk Management Designation (ARM).

A U.S. Army veteran of the Korean War, Ervin began his career with Wachovia Insurance Agency in 1956. Following that, he formed Ervin Insurance Service, Inc., in 1964. In 1982, he bought Haywood & Rankin Agency and formed Ervin-Haywood-Rankin Insurance Agency.

Bill and his wife, Alice, have son William G. Ervin, Jr., and stepson, B. Derick Kennedy.

The Alumnus/a of the Year Award's criteria is based on service to the university, to one's community, and to the church. This award is the highest honor the Alumni Association can bestow upon an individual.

1995 HONORARY ALUMNUS

James (Eddie) Oakley treats High Point University "as if he went to school here," said John C. Lefler, Vice President for Institutional Advancement, as he introduced the Honorary Alumnus award winner.

Oakley received recognition for his loyal support of High Point University. In 1988, Oakley started the move for scholarship money for the home furnishings marketing program for High Point University and is still an avid supporter of this program. He has volunteered for past capital campaigns, and is a current volunteer for the Founders Campaign. He recently completed a six-year term and has served as vice-president on the Board of Visitors for High Point University.

As a member of Archdale Friends Meeting, he has headed the finance committee for four years. His coaching presence with the youth of Jamestown exceeds twenty years.

Oakley has served as vice president of the Sports Booster Club at Ragsdale High School, and is a 22-year member of the Iron Dukes, the athletic club of Duke University. His Jaycees affiliation has been for 33 years and he was the recipient of the group's Distinguished Service Award in 1967. He serves on the Jamestown ABC Board and is a member of the North Carolina Fabric Men's Club.

Eddie and his wife, Jane, live in Jamestown, N.C. and have two children. He is owner and president of Eddie Oakley Sales, Inc.

1995 Service to the University Award Winners

Jean Coomes Woods '49 a retired school teacher, is one of this year's award winners selected by the Alumni Association. As Gary Cooper '77, President of the Alumni Association, commented, "Jean is certainly deserving of this service award and is always willing to volunteer her time to the cause of High Point University."

She has taught in seven schools, including: one year in Alexander County and 32 years in the Guilford County schools. Her experience also includes being at Colfax for two years; Oak View for one year; Jamestown for four years; Sedgfield for 24 years; and Millis Road for one year.

After receiving a B.S. Degree in Education from High Point University, she went to UNC-G for graduate studies. As a teacher she was a member of National Education and N.C. Education Association, for which she was treasurer of the Classroom Division from 1956 to 1960. She represented Guilford County at the Classroom Teachers Association Regional Conference in Louisville, Kentucky in 1956. Jean is member of Alpha Delta Kappa. She held positions such as sergeant-at-arms, historian and corresponding secretary.

Jean has also served her country during 1944 to 1946. She was a member of the WAVES, which then was a unit within the U.S. Navy. She earned the rank of Specialist 2nd Class and was in communications. Woods was stationed at Washington, D.C., and Patuxent River Naval Air Station in Maryland. She served as treasurer and membership chair and WIMSA chair for the Piedmont Tar Heels Chapter of WAVES National.

Presently Jean serves on the High Point University Alumni Board of Directors. She established the Coomes Scholarship at High Point University in memory of her parents. Jean is a member of the Lunch Bunch and is coordinator-court representative for the Hamilton Village residents' association in Greensboro. She serves on the Administrative Council of Hickory Grove United Methodist Church, where she also has been a trustee and on the finance committee.

Jean and her spouse, William W. Coomes '52, are residents of Greensboro, N.C.

Norris R. Woody, Jr. '79, of Huntersville, N.C., was a recipient of this year's Service to the University Award. Originally from Bassett, Va., Woody studied at Virginia Spanish Academy at the University of Madrid in Spain. He graduated from High Point University with a B.S. Degree in Pre-Law and Political Science.

In 1980, he became a board member for the Alumni Association, serving two consecutive terms as president. He was an ex-officio member of the University's Board of Trustees during 1990 to 1994. Woody now serves on the Board of Visitors and has volunted during past capital campaigns. Woody directs much effort toward safety in the sport of snow skiing. Many of his memberships, honors, hobbies, and interests revolve around skiing, Boy Scouts, and High Point University. He is author of Explorer Ski Safety, published by Irving Publishing Co., in 1985. In 1982, he received an honor from the National Ski Patrol for saving a human life. The award was the Yellow Merit Star. He is a member of Senior Patrollers of the National Ski Patrol Systems of Lakewood, CO, and is an instructor for National Ski Patrol Outdoor Emergency Care. He is on the National Search and Rescue Association Instructor and Monitoring Team and is on the board of directors of Explorer and Olympic Committee of Boy Scouts of America. He serves as instructor of CPR and BLS for the American Heart Association. Woody is owner and president of Woody Associates, Inc., a furniture consulting firm. He and his spouse, Patricia Ann, have two children, Melissa and Patrick.

"Norris truly loves High Point University. This love is demonstrated through his willingness to serve and support his alma mater. Because of his commendable service record with High Point University, the Alumni Association made a great decision to honor him," said Gary Cooper '77, president of the Alumni Association.

tions, including three statewide groups: the North Carolina Jaycees, Metropolitan Chambers of Commerce, and the United Way of North Carolina.

Twice he has received Young Man of the Year for High Point and Outstanding Young Men in North Carolina (the only man to obtain these honors twice). He also received the Most Outstanding Local and State Jaycee Hall of Leadership Award in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Additionally, Morgan is in Who's Who in North Carolina and Who's Who in American Law. Christ United Methodist Church in High Point gave him the Christian Service Award and he has been a delegate to the Western North Carolina Conference of the United Methodist Church since 1989. In 1991 Morgan was the High Point Enterprise's Citizen of the Year.

Jim also serves as chairperson of the High Point Preservation Society, City Historical District Commission and the Trustees of the High Point District of the United Methodist Church. He sits on the Nido Qubein Scholarship Committee, Guilford County Bar Association, Guilford Technical Community College. Also he is in his second year as chair of the High Point University Board of Visitors. He has volunteered for the Salvation Army, High Point YMCA, High Point Historical Society and Museum, United Way of Greater High Point, and local Cancer Society.

Morgan is a graduate of High Point High School, Guilford College and Cumberland School of Law of Samford University, and studied in High Point University's Evening Degree Program. His spouse is the former Ann Tinsley and they have two children: "Lea" Evans Morgan Pflaging and James F. "Jeff" Morgan II.

"Because of Jim's exemplary service record to his community and to High Point University, the Alumni Association felt it appropriate to honor him. We commend him for his continued dedication and leadership to High Point University and the High Point community," stated Gary Cooper '77, president of the Alumni Association. "We are very proud to call Jim one of our own!"

Bob Timberlake Joins High Point's Board of Trustees

Acclaimed realist painter Bob Timberlake has been unanimously elected to the High Point University Board of Trustees. The Board of Trustees is the institution's principal policy making body.

"High Point University likes its board to be representative of the cities around the central Piedmont," said John Lefler, the university's vice president for institutional advancement. "Bob Timberlake is a prominent area figure who has generously supported the university in past years," he said.

Timberlake is an internationally known realist painter who makes his home in Lexington, North Carolina. He began painting professionally in 1970 at the encouragement of Andrew Wyeth. His authentic depiction of the simple life that captures the history and heritage of North Carolina has endeared his work to millions of admirers around the world.

In 1990, inspired by designs from his artwork, Timberlake launched a comprehensive furniture line that has been recognized as the most successful in domestic furniture history. Further successes have followed in the home textile industry with his introduction of decorative throws, bedding and tabletop accessories.

High Point University is currently the only university in the United States that offers a business degree with an available concentration in home furnishings marketing.

Timberlake is chairman of the board of Bob Timberlake, Inc., a licensing company that acts as manager and agent of the Bob Timberlake® brand. The Lexington based company licenses products directly inspired by Timberlake's paintings in 15 categories through more than 20 licensees.

He currently sits on the Board of Lexington State Bank and is the official artist and spokesperson for Keep America Beautiful®. He has received numerous awards in recognition of his philanthropy and charitable works, and was recently honored with the Distinguished Alumnus Award from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Timberlake lives in Lexington with his wife, Kay. They have three children and seven grandchildren.

HIGH POINT UNIVERSITY

Construction begins in 1997 on a Fine Arts Center and a Humanities Building totaling $7 million.

The University revealed artist renderings of the Fine Arts Center and Humanities Building November 19, 1995.

The Fine Arts Center will house a 500 seat auditorium, a 125 seat "black box" theatre, a choral band room, an art gallery, practice and meeting rooms and administration offices. The center is expected to be approximately 33,000 square feet. The center was designed by architects Christopher Smallwood of London, England and Aaron Allred, High Point University Architect.

The Humanities Building, designed by University Architect Aaron Allred, will house multiple studios for: sculpture; drawing; photography; and music instruction. The building will provide additional classroom and faculty office space. The building will be approximately 20,000 square feet.

Charlotte Regional Campaign exceeded $500,000 goal by December 18, 1995

The Charlotte Regional Campaign to raise $500,000 for High Point University kicked off October 25, 1995 at the Queen City's Mint Museum.

Hugh L. McColl III chaired the campaign and stated, "I wanted Charlotte to be the pacesetter for the other thirteen regional campaigns to follow. Due to the hard work of many volunteers, we accomplished a great deal in a short amount of time. I hope the regional campaigns to follow surpass the $580,000 we received."

The Charlotte Campaign received $100,000 from the Broyhill Foundation, $100,000 from the Cannon Foundation, $150,000 from NationsBank and $230,000 from alumni and friends.

All gifts and pledges from the Charlotte Campaign and all other regional campaigns will go toward the $41 million Founders Campaign goal.

As of December 1, 1995, The Founders Campaign has received in gifts and pledges $21 million toward a $41 million goal.

High Point Ranked One of the Best

In the 1996 edition of America's Best Colleges, a publication of U.S. News & World Report, High Point University ranked among the top tier of the regional liberal arts colleges in the United States. Additionally, in the September 25, 1995, edition of U.S. News & World Report, High Point University ranked as one of the two most efficient regional liberal arts colleges in the South. Also, High Point is one of the 20 most efficient regional liberal arts colleges in the United States. Efficient colleges, by their definition, are those which have achieved quality while keeping costs low.

Mary Clinard Tinsley '29 of High Point, North Carolina gave a Satin Ebony Baldwin Grand Piano valued at over $27,000. The piano was unveiled at the 25th Annual University Prayer Breakfast and the first performance was given by concert pianist Randall Atcheson of Greenwich, Connecticut. The piano will be utilized for other special events, including future concerts in the Charles E. and Pauline Lewis Hayworth Fine Arts Center.

Charles C. Edwards Jr. '46 of High Point, North Carolina established the Charles Clifton Edwards Sr. Endowed Scholarship with a $150,000 gift to the University. The scholarship will give preference to North Carolina residents majoring in business or a related field. The gift will be a permanent addition to the University's endowment, and income earnings will be used for scholarships to deserving students. Charles Clifton Edwards Sr. was the founder of the former Edwards Business College in High Point. Edwards said, "Business and higher education were such an important part of my late father's life, and I want him to be remembered for his contributions in those areas."

Jean Coomes Woods '49 of Greensboro, North Carolina pledged $10,000 to the A.L. & I.W. Coomes Scholarship fund. The fund was originally established by Jean Coomes Woods in 1990 in memory of her parents. Woods retired from teaching after 33 years (32 of the 33 were spent in the Guilford County School System). Her years of service to education prompted her to provide opportunities to those ambitious career-oriented women students of North Carolina, attending High Point University.

Tubby Smith joins Georgia Bulldogs

Orlando "Tubby" Smith '73 has paid his dues as a college basketball coach. The road started at High Point College (University) as a player from 1969-1973 and has produced a successful coaching stint at Tulsa. Now, Smith accepted the men's basketball head coaching position at the University of Georgia earlier in the 1995 year.

Smith ranks fourth on High Point's all-time scoring list with 1,589 points (14.7 ppg average), trailing Gene Littles (2,398), Pete Collins (1,838) and Danny Witt (1,650). As a freshman he averaged 13.3 ppg, 12.6 as a sophomore, 16.4 as a junior and 17.3 as a senior. Also, in his senior year, he was team captain, scoring a career-high 32 points vs. Catawba.

His coaching career began as a high school basketball coach, from 1973-1979, at Great Mills High in Maryland and then at Hoke County High in North Carolina, compiling a six-year record of 74-54. From 1979-1991, he served as assistant coach at Virginia Commonwealth for seven years (144-64 record), South Carolina for three years (53-35), and Kentucky for two years (36-20). From 1991-1995, he served as head coach at Tulsa, compiling a four-year record of 79-43 with two straight NCAA Tournament appearances. Both appearances ended up in the Sweet Sixteen.

Smith's son, Orlando Jr., is a freshman point guard for the Georgia Bulldogs.

PROCTOR RECEIVES AWARD

Rick Proctor '79 received the Athletic Trainer of the Year award from the North Carolina Athletic Trainers Association. His award is the highest honor presented by the association.

Proctor serves as chair of the association's Task Force for Licensure of Athletic Trainers in North Carolina. He is director of the Sports Medicine Program at High Point University and recently became an associate professor. He received his bachelor of science degree in physical education from High Point University and a master of arts degree in sports medicine from UNC-Chapel Hill in 1981.

Sports medicine at High Point University accepts only 12 students into the full program, which begins in the junior year of study. With nearly 85 hopefuls, only a few make it. "Because we can accept only 12 students into the full program, there had to be a place for others to study sciences pertaining to exercise," Proctor said. "Sports Medicine is going to be a good program for anybody interested in exercise, and it will help retain students interested in sports medicine." Proctor helped to form a new exercise science major at the University, which also will add a sports management major.

Hislop joins John Paul Mitchell Systems

John Paul Mitchell Systems, manufacturers of Paul Mitchell Professional Salon Products, has proudly announced the appointment of Robert Hislop '66 as special assistant to the Chairman of the Board, John Paul DeJoria. In this position, Hislop will head up a variety of important projects aimed at ensuring the company's continued success. One of Hislop's maiden projects has been the ultra-successful launching of the Paul Mitchell "Champion" and "Master Retailer" programs, which are designed to increase salon creativity and retail sales through extensive training of distributors and their salon consultants.

Robert Hislop

Prior to joining John Paul Mitchell Systems, Hislop spent 20 years as a Special Agent in the United States Secret Service. With experience in intelligence, anti-terrorism, presidential protection and anti-counterfeiting, Hislop's vast knowledge will be a tremendous asset to the company in many ways, including its ongoing efforts to fight diversion.

Despite his many professional accomplishments, Hislop is most proud of his philanthropic efforts. He donates a great deal of his time to charities and has ongoing associations with the Special Olympics and the North American Police Ski Championships.

Hislop is a graduate of Boulder High School in Boulder, CO., and attended the University of Colorado before graduating from High Point University. He currently resides in Littleton, CO.

Milken Educator Award given to High Point Alumnus

Ronald Edward Price '68, who graduated from High Point University with a bachelor's degree, recently returned home from Los Angeles after collecting a $25,000 award at the 1995 Milken Family Foundation National Education Conference. Price is a teacher at St. Michaels Elementary School in St. Michaels, Maryland, and the recipient of a 1994 Milken Family Foundation National Educator Award.

Price joined nearly 150 other outstanding educators from across the country — considered among the nation's top elementary school educators — in collecting a total of $3.75 million in a single evening.

The awards ceremony marked the culmination of the three-day education conference, held at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles May 4-6, 1995. Each of the 150 Milken Educator Award recipients was presented $25,000, no strings attached. "By presenting each recipient a major financial award," says Lowell, Milken, president of the Milken Family Foundation, "we are telling these educators that their contributions and expertise are greatly valued — by the Foundation and by society."

The 150 current recipients were caught totally by surprise last summer and fall (1994) when they were told — in most cases by a state superintendent or commissioner of education — that they were to receive Milken Educator Awards. Because there is neither an application process nor a nomination procedure, recipients had no idea they even were being considered for the awards.

Instead, a blue-ribbon selection committee appointed by each state's department of education operated quietly and anonymously to select the recipients, employing criteria provided by the Milken Family Foundation.

The awards program has grown to include 30 states. In each state, a total of five teachers and administrators from elementary schools were selected last summer and honored at a banquet in the fall. These banquets are a significant element of the awards program, says Milken, because there the educators are recognized publicly by their peers and the community. Another important component, he says, is the professional development opportunity provided for award recipients at the education conference.

Price teaches physical education to grades kindergarten through fifth at St. Michaels Elementary School. He is responsible for the development and implementation of several programs related to physical education. He has created the "Multicultural Games from Nations Around the World," a program that introduces students to sports and games from other cultures. He has also developed several other programs, including a program that combines academic subject area with physical activities and another to help students determine and maintain their individual fitness.

The success of Price's programs has earned him four State Merit Awards in the last three years. Most recently, his county-wide bicycle riding safety program won a grant that will go towards the purchase of bicycle helmets for third grade students.

Steve Sharman '78, of Atlanta, Georgia has what it takes to be a successful model. Since graduation, Steve has been featured in a variety of endorsements, commercials, advertising campaigns, and magazines. These include Belk's, Land's End, formal wear companies, and more.

He is considered to be one of the best models in the Southeast. Interestingly enough, his spouse, the former Miss Georgia — 1990, and third runner up in the 1991 Miss USA pageant, is also a model.

In September 1995, Steve returned to the High Point area to appear in the Belk Beck's Fashion On The Horizon, A Theatrical Runway Experience. This fashion show was held to benefit the American Cancer Society.

Spaulding Named AP National Radio Sales Manager

Susan Spaulding '80 has been promoted to manager of national radio sales for the broadcast division of The Associated Press.

Based in Washington, D.C., she will handle sales and marketing to radio networks and syndicated programmers throughout the United States, as well as to stations and broadcast groups in New York City.

Spaulding has been AP regional radio executive in Chicago for nearly eight years, responsible for sales and membership support to radio stations in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin. Previously, she handled AP radio and television sales in northern California and Oregon.

Before joining AP in 1985, she worked in sales and sales management at North Carolina stations WKIX-AM in Raleigh and WOKX-AM/WGLD-FM in High Point. She holds a bachelor's degree in communications from High Point University.

Susan is one of three Spaulding sisters to receive a degree from High Point. Her father, Richard, continues to be active as an advisor to High Point University.

A not-for-profit membership cooperative, The Associated Press is the world's largest newsgathering organization, serving the major radio networks and nearly 5,000 radio stations nationwide with its news wires, radio networks, programming services and software. AP's broadcast division is based in Washington.

Highly Recommended

Levan Seperteladze '95 knows how to get a recommendation. In May of 1994, a letter from the Chairman of the Republic of Georgia crossed President Martinson's desk. Chairman Eduard A. Shevardnadze's letter of recommendation conveyed to President Martinson Levan's desire to attend High Point University and pursue a degree in international business.

Before coming to High Point, Levan attended Brevard College. He has since graduated from High Point University and now attends our graduate program. He hopes to graduate with a master of science degree in international management. Good luck Levan!

May 30, 1994

Dear President Martinson:

I am writing to you about a matter in which I have a strong personal interest. I hope you will make it possible financially for Mr. Levan Seperteladze to pursue his baccalaureate studies in international business at your university. With the assistance of President J. Thomas Bertrand, he has spent the past last year at Brevard College where he has taken all available business and finance courses.

Mr. Seperteladze is very promising young man from a highly esteemed family of academic renown in our country. His father is one of our leading specialists in international law. Together with his best friend, David Shegelia, who is married to my granddaughter and is a fellow in tax law at the law school at Emory University, Mr. Seperteladze is preparing himself to participate in constructing a new economy and business climate for our new democracy. I hope that you will ask your best teachers in business and economics to teach him everything they can that will be useful to us. We are looking to him and other Georgian students to return to Georgia as a team to take a leadership role in the future Georgia.

I am confident that your university will have reason to be proud of him in future years.

Sincerely,

Eduard A. Shevardnadze

CLASS NOTES

The Tag is Almost in the Bag

The North Carolina Division of Motor Vehicles, in conjunction with the Alumni Office of High Point University, is working on an official High Point University license tag. In order to proceed with the design and production of the tags, the Division of Vehicles requires 300 or more participants.

We need you to make it happen!

Mail or fax the following form if you're interested in the program. We have at least 300 interested alumni... and they have received applications. Simply complete the DMV application if you have received one and mail it to the DMV. If you need an application, fill out the form below. The process will proceed once the DMV receives 300 completed applications. The fee for this license is $45/year. Remember, send no money now - just your name, address and telephone number.

A Message from the Alumni Director

Most of you are aware of the current technology explosion in the area of computers and computer software. Today, it seems everything has become computerized.

Take, for example, calling someone on the telephone. Busy signals have been replaced with voice mail....a kinder, more polite way to say "leave a message, I do not want to take your call at this time."

Another example that comes to mind is the annoying recorded message one hears when placing orders over the telephone or making a long distance call or accepting long distance calls for that matter.... "Please press 1 if you are calling from a touch tone phone. Press 2 if you would like a listing of store hours. Press 3 if you would like to talk with a customer service representative. Press 4 if you know the extension of the person whom you are calling. Press 5 if you plan to accept this collect call. Press 6 if you want to hear this entire recording again. Press all the numbers, at one time, if confused and frustrated!!!"

Ahhh, the personal touch and warm voices of the technological era in which we live. What do I offer to this insight?? Our e-mail address! Yes, we, too, have jumped aboard the runaway train of computer enhancements. I do feel, however, this new means of communicating with your alma mater will be another way to keep us informed about yourself. We, in turn, can keep you abreast of current events and issues on campus.

We encourage you to use our new e-mail access to let us know of job promotions, marriages, relocations, births or any class notes information you would want to send to your former classmates.

Additionally, the Alumni Office plans to develop a home page site on the World Wide Web. Plans are to use this home page as an additional means of informing alumni, parents and friends about upcoming events, activities on campus or alumni gatherings in various cities around the United States. For those of you who have access to the Internet, you now have a reason to sign on.

I hope my computer mailbox stays full!

High Point University Praised For Self-Study, Accreditation Process

High Point University gained Level III accreditation from the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) Commission on Colleges. The University has been accredited since 1951, but this marks the first ever Level III ranking.

The Level III accreditation allows the University to award both baccalaureate and master's degrees. E. Roy Epperson and Morris G. Wray, vice presidents at the institution, spear-headed the process that included a self-study.

The self-study report has been heralded by SACS and held up as an example to other schools. "I rarely see such a positive report as this one," wrote Gloria Raines, chairwoman of the SACS Reaffirmation/Substantive Change Committee. "You have every reason to be proud of your fine university, and you will find that this report highlights many of your strengths."

Many suggestions of the SACS Visiting Committee, which made its visit in March, are already taking form on campus. For example, the new Master's of Business Administration program is slated to begin next fall.

EDP to Add More Major Choices

Evening Degree students at both the High Point and Madison Park campuses now have more choices in majors.

The Earl N. Phillips School of Business will open the Home Furnishings Marketing and Interior Design degrees to evening students beginning next fall. The new opportunities will benefit furniture industry professionals, said Marlon L. Winters, chairman of the business school.

"By adding the two majors to the Evening Degree Program, we will better serve individuals who now work or expect to work in the furniture industry or in other related occupations," Winters said. "They will be able to maintain employment, while working toward graduation."

Graduate Degrees Now Offered In The Evening

Evening Degree students now can take their education farther. Both campuses will offer graduate degrees beginning in August.

The Master of Business Administration (MBA), the Master of Science in Management and the Master of Science in International Management adds to the tally of degrees already offered by the school.

The University plans to offer three-hour classes on Saturdays for the MBA program, expanding choices for those students that may find it difficult to attend the evening classes.

Surratt Speaks to 1996 Education Majors

Dr. Jim Surratt, class of 1965, was recently on campus where he spoke to this year's graduating education majors on April 29, 1996. He offered advice regarding the teaching profession as they prepared for roles as teachers.

Surratt graduated from High Point College (University) with a degree in History. In 1968, he received his M.Ed. from UNCG and in 1974 received his Ed.D. from Duke University in Administration and Supervision. Since 1974, he has served in the capacity of superintendent. Currently, he is the superintendent of Wake County Public School Systems in North Carolina. Other experience includes the Independent School District in Plano, Tx., Volusia County, Florida Schools, Burlington City, N.C. Schools, and Goldsboro City Schools, also in North Carolina.

During his career, he has experienced numerous accomplishments. They include: developing a Florida Model Technology School; two International Baccalaureate schools; led districts to 18 U.S. Schools of Excellence Blue Ribbon Awards; and five National Drug-free School Awards.

Surratt's professional affiliations include: American Association of School Administrators; Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development; Education Research and Development Institute; and the Institute on Current Issues in School Law, Harvard Graduate School of Education.

We are happy to have Dr. Surratt home in North Carolina and look forward to his many successes with Wake County Schools.

One of a Kind

Many of you may remember a familiar name from your past...Dr. Arthur LeVey. Here is a brief synopsis of what is truly an incredible man with amazing achievements. For those of you who may have had Dr. LeVey as a professor, you are encouraged to contact him at Pacific Plaza Towers - Santa Monica - California - 90401

Dr. Arthur LeVey retired from the US Army in 1965 with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. He was born in 1905 in New York City and attended Colorado College of Education where he obtained an AB degree in 1927. He later obtained an M.A. in 1930 from the University of Denver and a Ph.D. in 1937 from the University of Chicago. He majored in Romance Languages. In 1949 he attended the Associate Basic Officers Course at the Infantry Centre in Fort Benning, Georgia, and in 1949 he attended the Strategic Intelligence School, Department of Defense, in Washington, D.C. From 1927 to 1931, he was an instructor of commercial Spanish at the College of Accounts and Finance, University of Denver, and from 1931 to 1937, he was a professor of Spanish and English at Michigan College of Mining and Technology. From 1937 to 1941, he was a professor of Spanish at Oklahoma College for Women. He arrived at High Point College (University) in 1958 where he served as Head of the Modern Language Department. He held this position until his retirement in 1970. Since 1970, he holds the title professor emeritus at High Point University. Additionally, he is also an honorary life member of the faculty.

LeVey began his military career in 1941. From 1941 until 1945 he was a G2 Liaison with Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service Division of the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) in Washington. Also, he was the ETO liaison officer with Technical Intelligence Army Service Forces with headquarters in Paris, Versailles and Frankfurt. He was a Reports Officer with OMGUS in Berlin from 1945 until 1947, a Staff Officer at the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Georgia, from 1947 until 1949 and an Intelligence Officer Foreign Liaison Branch, Intelligence Division, General Staff, U.S. Army from 1949 until 1953. Also, in 1953, he was a Civil Affairs Officer, at the headquarters of the 40th Infantry Division VIIIth Army, Far East Command. He served as Advisor to the G2 Section in 1953 until 1954 for the Korean Military Advisory Group, Republic of Korea Army. He was chief of the Editorial Training School, 525th Military Intelligence Group at Fort Bragg, N.C., from 1955 until 1957. He retired from military service in 1965.

He has authored various book reviews in "Books Abroad" for the University of Oklahoma Press, 1939-1940 with research including Studies in Alphonse X (El Sabio), Primera Cronica General. This document dates 1265. This research focuses on efforts to reconstitute verse and meter of lost Spanish epics, which the Chronicle preserved in prose form. He is also the recipient of a Commendation Ribbon, U.S. Army in 1946, Oak Leaf Cluster for Commendation Ribbon in 1953 and 'Official' of the Orden Militar de Ayacucho, Peruvian Armed Forces in 1951. His name appears in the "Dictionary of International Biography" and in the International Who's Who of Intellectuals.

Since retirement from High Point University, LeVey makes his home in Santa Monica, California. We salute you Dr. LeVey!

An Unfrog-like View

E. Roy Epperson

In 1957, the same year that I began my career in higher education, Walt Kelly, the creator of Pogo, wrote:

"...it might be a good idea to remember the two frogs. You will recall that each started from his home country, traveled along a road, each heading toward the other, both intent upon seeing what sort of land lay beyond the mountain on the middle border.

They met at the summit and each stood erect for a quick preview of the place he'd like to see. Naturally, with their eyes on the tops of their heads, like respectable frogs everywhere, each frog's gaze projected backward along the route that he had taken. So, with a certain amount of grumbling and complaint they decided to return home, "For," as one said to the other, "everything in your country is exactly as it is in mine."

Of course, each had again looked at his own land, and the miracle of the story lies not in the fact that both were fooled, but that from such a vantage point neither had seen anything strange, wonderful or new about his home country. Presumably, neither had seen his country from the top of a hill before. Both frogs, for their entire lives, had been having a frog's-eye view of their homelands, a view that leaves something to be desired by those of us who are not professional frogs."

On June 6, 1996, I will begin my thirty-first year at High Point University. As I look back over these past thirty years, the view is very unfrog-like indeed. The view here always has been forward and not backward. It is easy to "see" the changes that have occurred in bricks-and-mortar: Belk and Finch residence halls, Haworth Hall of Science, Hayworth Chapel, the Slane University Center, Smith Library, the Milis Athletic/Convocation Center, expansion of Cooke Hall, renovations of Roberts Hall and most of the other buildings, and, of course, the reconstruction of the front lawn.

Other changes? Freshmen in 1966 (Are they freshpersons in 1996?) ate their meals in Harrison Hall. Also, that was the location of the required opening reception hosted by the President and his lady. All of the faculty and administration formed the receiving line and everybody was expected to be properly dressed, and that meant floor-length dresses for the women and baseball caps were seldom seen. How times have changed! Faculty meetings were held in the 'band room' of the Memorial Auditorium (there are too many of us to fit there now); body piercing was considered to be a torture technique and not a cosmetic enhancement; the entire student body could be accommodated in the auditorium; there were required weekly convocations with each student having an assigned seat and attendance was checked and recorded; and, graduation ceremonies were also held at the end of the summer session. Remember streaking? Remember protests on the front lawn and one of our students sleeping under a large "Old Glory"?

It is refreshing to look back to see where we have been but perhaps far more important to look forward. As I look forward to 1999 and the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of High Point University and to 2000 and the beginning of the new century, it is very reassuring to know that there do not appear to be any 'professional frogs' in the academic and administrative leadership of High Point University.

E. Roy Epperson

What Have You Been Doing Since Graduation?

After graduating in December of 1984, I came out to Los Angeles to attend film school. My plan was to use my business degree, along with some cinema experience, and become a producer. In the meantime, I also started doing stand-up at clubs around town at night, having been prompted to do so by Jimmie Walker, who I met at High Point while working for Student Union in 1984.

Film school was a wonderful experience. One of the great benefits, although I did not know it at the time, was that I was asked to be an actor in over 20 student films. That, and my broadcasting exposure to stand-up at the Comedy Store led to my first "break" in 1987. I was told a casting director was looking for comedians for a big national Sprite commercial. I was not a member of the Screen Actors Guild, and was treated as such. At the first audition, I waited four hours just to be seen. Something that hasn't happened since. There were at least a hundred people waiting that day, and they had been casting for weeks, both in L.A. and New York. I was told later they had seen about a thousand people.

Let me just say that I didn't think my chances were good. Well, I got a callback. That's when they bring you back to meet the power people, the director, the advertising agency and clients, in this case, the Sprite people. My problem though was that I was not a member of S.A.G. If they wanted me for their spot, they would have to pay S.A.G. to have me involved.

My chances seemed slim, since so many others were indeed members. Another call. They wanted to see me a third time. Fairly rare, even today. When I arrived there was only one other guy and myself going in. I thought, "wow," is this how it works? The chances of ever working as an actor are low, and making a living at it to boot? Nil. Well, when I left that audition, the casting director said my chances were good, but they had yet to make a decision, good luck.

When I got home, I started pacing. I was so close. All of my dreams were riding on this. To be on television. To know that millions of people were watching me perform. To actually make money at something I love. The call came. I got the job. No joke, when I got the news and hung up the phone, I started jumping up and down in my apartment. Then, of course, I started calling everyone I know. My mom first. I'm sorry, you've got to call your mom first. My first professional acting job started with the filming of a Sprite commercial on February 17, 1987.

I have done 100 commercials to this date. The highlight being a Little Caesar's Pizza spot entitled, "Origami" in which I won a 1989 Clio Award as Best Performer of the Year. I have also acted in 21 films, including a co-star role in the current film

"Houseguest." I have also been in "Indecent Proposal," "Toys," "Super Mario Bros.," "Junior," and I have a nice scene with Alec Baldwin in this summer's film, "Heaven's Prisoners." I currently have a recurring role on the ABC show, "Boy Meets World," and am doing Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing" at a local theatre.

I also continue auditioning, my goal being a regular role on a sit-com. I have a beautiful 1926 Spanish home in the Hollywood Hills and a condo in West Hollywood that I rent out. I have been very lucky and blessed to get this far. I feel High Point was the starting ground for my dreams and I have fond memories of my time there. I have lost touch with some I know and maybe there are others who I want to meet. Kevin West '84 — 3236 Bennett Drive, Los Angeles, CA 90068 (213) 874-2003.

Global Warming

Charles J. Warde Ph.D. & Linda M. Petrou Ph.D.

Have you seen the headlines? "Warmest year on record!" "Largest number of Atlantic hurricanes!" "First loss of winter wheat crop!" "Return to the Dustbowl conditions of the 1930s!"

Scientists have ascribed all of these climatic phenomena and more to "global warming". With these headlines screaming at us weekly, articles in popular magazines and scientific journals, and the movies "Waterworld" and "The American President", surely, everyone by now has heard the term "global warming".

What is global warming? The Earth receives energy from the Sun, principally in the form of light. (Remember ROY G BIV, the rainbow man who visits every high-school science laboratory!). Earth returns this energy to the Universe as infrared (or heat) radiation. Certain atmospheric gases—the so-called "greenhouse gases"—intercept this infrared radiation and return approximately half of the energy to the Earth. The Earth must consequently heat up until 100 energy units are released to the Universe for every 100 units of incoming light radiation.

Which gases are "greenhouse gases" and why are they so called? In order of importance, the "greenhouse gases" are water vapor, carbon dioxide, chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs), methane, and nitrous oxide ("laughing gas"). The term "greenhouse gases" is used because these gases trap heat in the atmosphere just as the glass does in a greenhouse.

It will surprise most readers to learn that the Earth enjoyed the benefits of global warming even before the dawn of life on this planet. Water vapor in the atmosphere leads to an average "global warming" of approximately 63°F. Imagine a hot summer day at 93°F! Without water vapor, the temperature would be a frigid 30°F!

So! If global warming is so good, why the concern? Water vapor, unfortunately, is not the only "greenhouse gas". Since the Industrial Revolution, humankind has released into the atmosphere huge and ever-increasing quantities of the other greenhouse gases. Additional carbon dioxide results from the burning of coal, oil, and natural gas. CFCs, synthesized for refrigeration, air-conditioning, and styrofoam-production applications, are being replaced by HFCs (hydrofluorocarbons) because of ozone-layer depletion concerns. HFCs are also "greenhouse gases". However, their global-warming capabilities are reduced because of their shorter atmospheric lifetimes. Methane is produced by coal mining, rice paddies, landfills, and ever-increasing herds of flatulent cattle, while nitrous oxide is released by fertilized fields. Increasing concentrations of these gases lead to an enhanced "greenhouse effect" and, consequently, increased global warming.

How much global warming has been observed to date? All scientists—believers in global warming and non-believers alike—concede that the average global temperature increase has been approximately 0.9°F over the past century. This increase seems minuscule. It is, however, significant against a total temperature swing of only 3.5°F since the last Ice Age, approximately 10,000 years ago. Huge climate changes have been observed in these ten millennia, coinciding with relatively minor fluctuations in temperature. Ice-cores from the Antarctic and Greenland, ocean sediments, and tree-rings confirm changes in climatic conditions, described in written history, and provide clear pictures of climates during prehistoric times.

What do we and our children and their children have to look forward to over the next century? The Inter-Governmental Panel on Climate Change—an international committee of prestigious scientists and engineers, nominated by individual governments—have concluded that global warming is already occurring. The consensus of the vast majority of scientists, as expressed at a major conference in Madrid early this year, is that the average global temperature will rise by a minimum of 1.8°F to a maximum of 6.6°F over the next century. Climate changes are inevitable. But, what of the other potential changes? Sea-level rise, increased numbers and severity of hurricanes, disappearances of fish and shellfish habitats, migrations of flora and fauna to cooler areas, loss of the U.S. Corn Belt to Canada, grain harvests in Siberia and the Australian Outback for the first time in recorded history—no one knows what will happen or when. All that we are sure of is that major changes are on the way.

Only a concentrated effort by governments, industry, business, and individual citizens could delay this massive change in climates worldwide. Absent major food-production catastrophes, this effort will not happen. The problem is that there will be winners and losers. Russians and Australians would welcome larger harvests, while Nova Scotians would welcome palm trees and milder winters. Contrast these outcomes with the permanent flooding of large portions of Florida, Louisiana, Texas, Egypt, and Bangladesh, and with the inundation and disappearance of many island nations!

The industrialized nations of the First World will be able to adapt to the changed conditions, as will, to a lesser extent, the nations of the post-Communist Second World. Third World nations, located principally in the Southern Hemisphere, will endure savage hardships.

Is this just another headline-grabbing scientific scare? Even a small group of scientists, who have vociferously denied the prospects of global warming, are shifting their ground. Joining the consensus, they now concede that global warming will occur with only minor warming. Let's hope they're right! All of the indicators, however, are pointing in the wrong direction. Population increase, economic development, the increasing demand for fossil fuels—all of these will stress the atmosphere and, consequently, cause global warming. Watch for new headlines, articles, T.V. shows, and pundit commentary! You will be hearing more and more about "global warming"!

Global Warming (IDS 360) is an Interdisciplinary Studies course in the High Point University Catalogue. Dr. Warde, an Associate Professor of Chemistry who teaches and practices scientific skepticism, first proposed the course in 1991 in order to debunk global warming and other ecological prophecies of doom. The course was first taught in the spring semester of 1992. Slowly metamorphosing into a concerned observer because of the growing weight of scientific evidence, Dr. Warde continues to develop the course for presentation in the Day Program and the Evening Degree Program. Dr. E. Roy Epperson—Vice-President for Administrative Affairs, Professor of Chemistry, and former Chair of the Chemistry & Physical Science Department—and Dr. Linda Petrou—an adjunct in Political Science teaching International Relations and U.S. Government at High Point University—first taught this course in Fall 1994. Since then, Dr. Petrou has co-taught the course with Drs. Epperson and Warde.

Tubby Smith is Growing Something Special

Georgia coach in familiar postseason territory with new team.”

• Basketball analyst Dick Vitale exclaims in the Atlanta Journal-Constitution: “Georgia made a great choice with Tubby. ... Everybody in the SEC had better look out (baaa-bee).”

• Rick Pitino, who coaches in the SEC at Kentucky, heaps praise on his former assistant in an interview with Athens Magazine: “Tubby’s a ten-star teacher in a five-star system. You’ve got yourselves a great coach, a great teacher. ... In future years I know it’s going to be very, very difficult for us to go against Georgia.”

No Surprise to Jerry Steele

All of the success and recent praise from basketball luminaries doesn’t surprise Jerry Steele any more than a Tubby Smith steal and high-flying lay-up did in 1973 (dunks were banned in those days). That was Smith’s senior year, when Steele, who had coached in the NBA, took charge of the High Point team.

“I really enjoyed coaching him,” says Steele, who continues as head coach of the High Point men’s team as well as Athletic Director. “He was special. I knew he would be successful at whatever he did. That he chose to coach is good for basketball and good for the young men who play for him. We at High Point University can be proud that Tubby is part of us.”

Beyond the Maryland prep star’s exceptional basketball skills, Steele identified three personal traits that helped Smith achieve success:

• Eloquence. “He was articulate and could talk to anybody about anything. Sports writers loved him because he was always very quotable.”

• Personality. “He got along with people — faculty and students alike. He just seemed to like everybody, and everybody liked him.”

• Work Ethic. “He was a very hard worker — on the court and off the court. You could see that he was determined to succeed, no matter what it took. He always says he learned that from his parents, who are just as extraordinary as he is.”

One of 17 Children

Orlando Smith is the sixth of 17 children reared by Parthenia and Guffrie Smith on a tenant farm near Scotland, Md., almost at the end of the road at the Chesapeake Bay. His mother nicknamed him “Tubby” because he never wanted to get out of an old washtub during his Saturday night baths. The name — which seems ironic upon meeting the slim, dapper, 6’2” coach — obviously stuck.

“A lot of what I do comes from lessons my father taught me when I was growing up on the farm,” Smith says. “My father always told me to be the best I could be, and to be the best you have to challenge yourself every day. We all have challenges, all have weaknesses, all have deficiencies. The person or team that becomes successful, or is No. 1, is the one that can overcome and surpass deficiencies.”

Guffrie Smith, Tubby’s hero, still runs the farm after quintuple bypass surgery. At 74, he knows about overcoming challenges. Guffrie never knew his father, and his mother died when he was 5. He moved in with an uncle, and at 13 quit school to work full-time to help support the family. Guffrie pressed on, earning a high school graduate equivalency diploma in the Army, as well as a Purple Heart after being wounded in Italy during World War II.

Back home from the war, Guffrie Smith farmed, drove a school bus, served as the local barber, worked construction and did whatever it took to make ends meet for his growing family that eventually numbered 19. He and his wife held high expectations for their children, demanding they do their chores, go to church, complete their homework, and toe the straight and narrow. Twelve of their children have graduated from college.

Tubby still believes in lessons he learned on Sundays at St. Luke’s United Methodist Church and those he learned during his disciplined but loving childhood. The Ten Commandments, the Golden Rule and Martin Luther King’s views on nonviolence are woven into the fabric of this man.

At High Point

In 1969, Tubby Smith was recruited by the University of Maryland after a stellar career at Great Mills High School, where his positive influence is credited with defusing a volatile situation after south Maryland schools were integrated in the mid-’60s. Fortunately for High Point, Maryland changed coaches that year, hiring Lefty Driesell, and Smith elected to play for Bob Vaughn as a Panther.

Smith was the only African-American among eight freshmen

A year ago, the University of Georgia named a High Point alumnus the head coach of its men’s basketball team. Today, the university has nicknamed its coliseum after him, and the Bulldogs are playing “TubbyBall” at “The Tub” in Athens.

Orlando “Tubby” Smith has certainly soared over the rim in the eyes of Georgia faithful with his special brand of enthusiasm and hard work. During his first season, he full-court-pressed the “Dawgs” into the AP Top 20 and NCAA “Sweet 16” with his leadership skills and basketball savvy. He is a hoop dream come true.

Frankly, my dear, Tubby Smith has football-crazed fans in Georgia giving more than a damn about basketball. He has them worked up into a Tobacco Road frenzy. And he’s getting a lot of attention in high places. Consider this:

• A USA Today headline proclaims: “TubbyBall cleans up again —

"You could see that he was determined to succeed, no matter what it took."

basketball players enrolling in 1969. Four years later, without spending a day in summer school, he was the only one of them to graduate on time.

Smith believes athletics can provide an educational opportunity for minority and low-income youth. He maintains high academic standards for his players, but is troubled by some views on raising those standards as a matter of NCAA policy.

"You've got to give them a chance, but you don't cut them any slack," he says. "Give them an opportunity but demand that schoolwork be given the same emphasis as playing their sport. If they are willing to work at their sport, then they should be willing to work in the classroom."

Reminding players that there are less than 350 jobs in the NBA, he expects them to go to class, study hard and get their degree.

As a Panther, Smith was a four-year starter under three coaches and captain during his senior season. He averaged 15 points and 5 rebounds, and exploded for a career high 32 against Catawba as a senior. Later that season he smashed his hand against the rim trying to block a shot. The injury stalled his All-Conference senior campaign under new head coach Jerry Steele and may have cost him a shot at the NBA.

But his senior year had a happy ending off the court. Cruising around campus in his 1964, two-tone Impala — "nicest car I ever had" — he got the attention of Donna Walls '76, who would become High Point's first African-American homecoming queen and eventually his wife.

"She was a freshman cheerleader, and I was a senior, kind of a big man on campus," he recalls. "She lived in Richmond, which was on the way back to Maryland. One holiday she asked for a ride, and I was like, 'Yeah, sure, no problem.' Like I'd do her a favor. She did me the biggest favor of my life."

"Best Coach In America"

Donna and Tubby Smith were married December 27, 1975. They have three sons: Orlando Jr. "G.G.," 19; Saul, 17; and Brian, 11. G.G. made teaching-coaching position at Great Mills High School, his alma mater.

"I knew how much I loved the game of basketball," he says, "so I decided if I can't play, let's coach."

Smith's teams compiled a four-year mark of 46-36. With a strong recommendation from Jerry Steele, he moved to Hoke County High School in Raeford, N.C., where his teams posted a 28-18 record over two years.

In 1979 J.D. Barnett, who coached game. From Steele he got his inspiration.

"Coach Steele has been my mentor," Smith says. "He has done just about everything in basketball — playing for Wake Forest, coaching in the NBA, and winning over 500 games as a college coach. Obviously, he knows what he's talking about, but he also has a great sense of humor and doesn't take himself too seriously. The way he handles himself makes you want to work hard for him. His philosophy about life is close to mine."

From Virginia Commonwealth, he moved his growing family to Columbia, S.C., where he was recruited by the University of South Carolina. The Gamecocks went 53-35 during his three years as an assistant.

In 1989, Rick Pitino sought Smith's help as he assumed control of the embattled University of Kentucky program, which had been stung by NCAA probation. Demonstrating his respect for Smith, Pitino named him associate head coach his final season with the Wildcats. Together they turned the program around quickly, guiding Kentucky to a 22-6 record and ninth place in the final AP poll in '91.

Tulsa Gets the Nod

By the spring of '91, Smith had received numerous offers for head coaching positions. The University of Tulsa got the nod, and the Smiths began homesteading in Oklahoma that summer.

Head coach Tubby Smith led the Hurricane to a 79-43 record over four years. His teams won consecutive Missouri Valley Conference championships in '94 and '95 with records of 23-8 and 24-8, respectively. They made two straight trips to the NCAA Tournament's round of "Sweet 16," and Smith was named Missouri Valley Conference Coach of the Year his final two seasons at Tulsa.

his first appearance in the NCAA Tournament this March as a freshman at the University of Georgia. Although offered scholarships by other colleges, he wanted to play for his dad, whom he considers "the best coach in America."

Smith's coaching career began in '73 when he wasn't drafted by the NBA. He considered joining the Air Force to become a pilot, but was offered a

Smith during his sophomore and junior years, took notice and offered him an assistant coaching position at Virginia Commonwealth University. During his seven years at VCU, six under Barnett, the teams soared to an overall 144-64 record, winning three Sun Belt Conference titles and earning five appearances in the NCAA Tournament.

From Barnett he learned the fundamentals of coaching the college

He was also named 1995 Coach of the Year by the Black Coaches Association and honored with an invitation to coach the north squad at the U.S. Olympic Festival in Denver last summer. His team won the gold medal.

When the invitation from Georgia Athletic Director Vince Dooley came last spring, Smith was torn. He was committed to his players and enjoyed the atmosphere at Tulsa: "It reminds me a lot of High Point — there's the same feeling of family." But the offer to direct a program at a major university in the Southeastern Conference was too good to refuse.

"We spent a week in a very extensive evaluation process, and there were a lot of very outstanding coaches," Dooley says. "We talked with many people around the country who know basketball, and the name of Tubby Smith kept coming up at the top of everyone's list."

Georgia Associate Athletic Director Dick Bestwick, who worked with Smith at South Carolina, adds: "There is so much to like about Tubby Smith. You almost don't know where to start when you look at his attributes. I guess the thing I like about him most is that he got into coaching for the right reasons — he loves the game and the young men who play it.

"He is the essence of what a good teacher should be — knowledgeable in his field, thorough in his teaching, patient with his students and, above all, caring in his approach. Mistakes get corrected very quickly, but in a way that motivates a person to go all out without fear of making a future mistake."

Nothing To Fear

Smith contends as long as people work hard, don't quit, overachieve every day, they have nothing to fear. Certainly not failure.

"Because people who give a game, or a sport, or their lives everything they have don't fail," he says. "They will make mistakes, but they will not fail. They might not win a game, or have a winning season, but, ultimately, they will be winners."

That belief resonates at the core of Tubby Smith... gives him confidence... makes him special.

"Growing up on a farm teaches you a lot of things about how life works," Smith says. "It teaches you the importance of longevity, the value of patience, of nurturing, cultivating. When you watch things grow, help build things, you realize if you want to grow, build something worthwhile, you can't rush things. It's the same with a team, with watching young players grow, nurturing them, building a program the right way.

"If you take your time and do things right, you're going to grow something special."

Growing something special... that's what Tubby Smith is all about.

COMMENCEMENT 1996

At 9:00 a.m., on a bright, beautiful May morning, the Class of 1996 gathered on the Greensward for the traditional procession to the front lawn. In the background, one could hear the familiar melody of Pomp and Circumstance as the graduates marched in triumphantly. This year's commencement speaker featured an alumnus from the Class of 1965.

Richard E. McDowell '65 addressed an eager graduating class with words of encouragement as they started their careers beyond the hallowed halls of High Point University. McDowell is currently the President of the University of Pittsburgh in Bradford, Pennsylvania. He has devoted his career to acquiring knowledge, and the retention of that knowledge that goes beyond his special fields of interest — developmental biology, physiology, and biochemistry.

After earning his bachelor's degree in biology from High Point College (University), he went to St. Louis University where he earned both the M.S. and Ph.D. degree. Later in his career, he received an appointment of assistant professor of biology and director of admissions at the University of Pittsburgh at Bradford. He also assumed the additional responsibilities of assistant to the president in academic affairs. In 1973, at the young age of 29, he became one of the youngest university presidents in the country.

McDowell is also a published author in the areas of education and biology. He has served on boards for numerous hospitals, the YMCA, United Way and the American Cancer Society. His honors include: Alpha Sigma Nu; St. Louis University Teaching Fellowship; Atomic Energy Commission Fellowship; Sigma Xi; Jaycees' Ten Outstanding Young Men of Pennsylvania; and Jaycees' Outstanding Young Men of America.

High Point University adds to his numerous honors and accolades by awarding McDowell with the highest honor of honorary degree. During Commencement 1996, he received the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters.

COMMENCEMENT NEWS

Dr. Page Receives the Slane Teaching-Service Award

Dr. Nelson F. Page received the Meredith Clark Slane Distinguished Teaching/Service Award during Commencement 1996. Dr. Page is the chair of the Department of Mathematics. The annual award recognizes teaching excellence. Nominations from faculty, staff and students help determine the winner.

Dr. Nelson F. Page

Dr. Page is a resident of High Point and has been with High Point University since 1973. He has served in the capacity of associate professor (1973-1978) and professor since 1978. He assumed the role of department chair in 1973. Before High Point University, Dr. Page served the University of North Carolina at Greensboro as an instructor and assistant professor from 1966 until 1973. In 1963, he received the NASA Fellowship at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. This followed his stint as Teaching Fellow at Chapel Hill from 1962-1963. Additionally, he taught in the Guilford County public school system from 1961-1962.

Dr. Page is a member of the Mathematical Association of America and the North Carolina Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

Former Chairman of the Board Receives Honorary Degree

Roger Soles, former chairman of the Board of Trustees at High Point University, received an honorary degree during Commencement 1996. The degree he now holds is the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters. Because of his commitment to higher education in the State of North Carolina, this degree honors Soles for his sustained support of High Point University and other North Carolina schools. Through the company he represents, which is Jefferson-Pilot Corporation, many gifts support independent colleges across the state from Brevard to Chowan.

Soles served with great distinction for eight years as High Point University's Chairman of the Board of Trustees. Friends and business associates of Mr. Soles donated over $300,000 to the University in his honor when he retired.

He is the past chairman of the Board of Trustees of Wesley Long Community Hospital in Greensboro and chairman of the North Carolina Citizens for Business and Industry. Also, Soles is the former chairman of the Independent College Fund of North Carolina. This fund consists of 27 privately supported institutions of higher learning. Another area of interest is his role as director of the Children's Home Society of North Carolina. Furthermore, Mr. Soles received the Distinguished Citizen of the Year award from the Greater Greensboro Chamber of Commerce in 1986.

Bachelor's gown is always black. The gown has long pointed sleeves, and it is worn closed. Both the square cap and its tassel are black. The hood, which indicates the faculty in which the degree is earned and the institution conferring it, is rarely worn.

Master's gown is black, and it usually worn open. The long pointed sleeves are closed and hang down from the elbow. The hood is black and lining it are the colors of the institution conferring the degree. Both the cap and the tassel are black.

Doctor's gown is usually (but not always) black. It is worn both open and closed. On each sleeve there are three horizontal velvet bars. A gold tassel hangs from the square black cap. The hood, which identifies both faculty and school, is 4 feet long.

ACADEMIC COLORS

The color bars you see on the sleeves, trimming and hoods of academic gowns have a meaning all their own. They describe the area of study by a professor. Here's a list to help you decipher them:

Microsoft Helps to Bring the Internet to North Carolina Libraries, Colleges & Universities

Bill Gates Announces More Than $5.4 million in Software, Training & Technical Support

REDMOND, Wash, April 11 - Microsoft Chairman and CEO Bill Gates announced three North Carolina educational initiatives totaling more than $5.4 million. Microsoft announced it is providing a combination of financial and technical support, software and training to the following educational organizations:

- Independent College Fund of North Carolina. Microsoft will provide $3.1 million in software through the national Foundation for Independent Higher Education (FIHE) to benefit its 28 Fund colleges and universities in North Carolina. The colleges will receive the Windows 95®, Microsoft® Word, Microsoft Excel, Microsoft Office Standard for Windows 95 and Windows NT® Server operating system. The software and support will expand technological capabilities, including Internet access, for students at 28 of North Carolina's most prestigious liberal arts colleges and universities.

- United Negro College Fund (UNCF). Six historically black colleges and universities in North Carolina, all members of UNCF, will receive more than $2 million in software, including Windows 95 and Office for Windows 95. The North Carolina schools are part of a more than $16 million national partnership between Microsoft and UNCF in which Microsoft is providing software, support, training, internship opportunities, computer science department curriculum and support in developing a site for UNCF on the Internet's World Wide Web.

- Public Library of Charlotte & Mecklenburg County. As part of its more than $3 million national Libraries Online! partnership with the American Library Association, Microsoft will provide more than $385,000 in financial support, software, training and technical support to the Charlotte & Mecklenburg County Library. The goal of Libraries Online! is to research and evaluate innovative approaches for providing Internet and multimedia PC access for the public, particularly in economically disadvantaged communities. Microsoft will provide Internet software, high-speed telecommunications, multimedia PCs and CD-Rom titles to the following libraries: West Boulevard Branch; Hickory Grove Branch; Scaleybark Branch; City View Branch; the Anita Stroud Center; Charlotte Emergency Housing; Wilmore Community Center; and Highland Community Haven.

"North Carolina is home to many important businesses, colleges and universities," said Gates. "Our hope is that the software and technical support we provide can help to build a 'connected learning community' in North Carolina, one in which everyone participates and collaborates on lifelong learning for students of all ages and walks of life."

"Microsoft's gift will have an impact like that of the first telephones on these small college and university campuses," said John Allison, chairman of the Independent College Fund of North Carolina. "The students who attend Independent College Fund institutions will have the stimulating opportunity of using the most advanced and sophisticated software available in the world. Bill Gates' leadership and the vision of Microsoft indicate that they are committed to education in a big way."

"Microsoft's contribution to UNCF helps our member colleges take an essential step toward closing America's technology gap," said William H. Gray, president and CEO of The College Fund/UNCF. "By opening a new world of opportunity for our students, this gift will help prepare today's students for tomorrow's jobs, and help America compete successfully in the global marketplace."

"Because of this marvelous gift from Microsoft, we will continue to be the leading provider of new communications technologies for the community and region," said Peter Keber, Chairman of the Public Library of Charlotte & Mecklenburg County Board of Trustees. "Libraries Online! is an exciting, innovative approach. We are extremely grateful to be a part of it."

Edwards Endows Second Scholarship in '96

High Point University students will have the opportunity to receive a new fully endowed scholarship next year.

Charles C. Edwards, Jr. of High Point recently gave the University $147,000 in stocks to set up an endowed scholarship fund honoring his late mother, Alice Stokes Edwards (1887-1958).

The Alice Stokes Edwards Scholarship is designated to be given to females studying in the Earl N. Phillips School of Business at the University.

The gift matches an earlier gift Edwards made that established a similar scholarship honoring his father Charles Clifton Edwards, Sr. Both gifts were made in the 1995-1996 fiscal year.

John C. Lefler, vice president for institutional advancement at the University, said Edwards has set an example for alumni interest in the school.

"Charles Edwards, again, has epitomized his concern for the future of High Point University in the establishment of a second scholarship," he said. "He is a valued alumnus, and the benefit of his philanthropy will be felt by students for years to come."

Edwards is a 1946 alumnus of the University, who obtained a bachelor of arts degree in history and English.

Edwards remembers vividly his mother and her faithfulness to the Edwards Business College, founded by his father in 1912 and operated until its sale in 1935. Alice Edwards worked diligently to find job opportunities for the students of the school through such contacts as the former Adams-Millis employment office.

James H. Millis, University Trustee, said the University is blessed to have such an alumnus:

"It has been my privilege to have grown up with Charles Edwards, having known not only Charles, but his brother and his mom and dad, even back to the point where Charles' father started Edwards Business College," Millis said. "The University is blessed to have alumni such as Charles Edwards."

"As they make substantial gifts back to the University, I think it shows their respect for the University and how much they appreciated their education at what was then High Point College."

The Right Set of Circumstances

You never know what hand life will deal you. You just have to try and build the best hand you can with the cards you hold.

George Erath, chairman of the University Board of Trustees and chairman of the board at Erath Veneer Corporation, holds steadfast to this philosophy.

"All we are, are stewards of what we get," says the 1952 High Point graduate. "I know people who are lots smarter than I am, but they weren't in the right place at the right time."

Born in Chicago, Erath first traveled below the Mason-Dixon line in 1948. He came to Lumberton, N.C., for spring training with the Chicago Cubs organization during his professional baseball days. Erath, who had always been interested in pursuing an education, found the right circumstances there.

"I met a man, Bob Hartley, whose family ran the YMCA (in High Point)," Erath says. "I asked him about a place I could go to school. I needed a place that would cooperate with my baseball schedule. And he said, 'You need to come up and take a look at High Point College."

"And they were most cooperative. Everyone was so gracious, and they said they would work out a schedule where they'd prepare the work for me to complete when I left for spring training, and I could do the rest by correspondence."

Such cooperation touched Erath.

"If it hadn't been for High Point University — that's where the key was — without their cooperation, I could've never completed my degree," he says. "It all turned out wonderfully, and that's why I've said

A young George Erath sports his Chicago Cubs uniform

"I'm so obligated to High Point University. They gave me the opportunity to meet my schedule requirements and at the same time get my degree."

While Erath never got to the Major Leagues, baseball did get him on base with his business career. After playing professional baseball for six years, Erath took the helm of the Hi-Toms, a High Point/Thomasville baseball club that was in financial turmoil.

"The director came to see me one day and said we'd like to offer you a job operating this baseball club, which had some financial problems. Basically the board of directors was made up of the industrial leadership of High Point and Thomasville. I came here and two things happened: it immediately gave me the opportunity to meet all of the key people in the two communities, and it was a good time to step in."

The Hi-Toms won the pennant that year under Erath's direction. Following the impressive season, he attended a baseball management school operated by Major League general managers and owners. He made a lot of contacts and was offered a job with the New York Yankees.

But he was too valuable to lose.

"Jimmy Mitchell (a director of the Hi-Toms) called me when he found out about the Yankees' offer," he says. "He asked me to come back here and said if I would operate the ball club the next year, he'd teach me the veneer business."

Things fell into place for Erath, proving once again to him that "life is a funny set of circumstances."

Erath took over a veneer plant in Virginia that was in financial trouble. From that humble start, he built an extremely successful veneer business — with, he emphasizes, a lot of help from his friends along the way.

For that reason, he thinks it's essential to give back to those that made his success possible.

"You don't own any of it," Erath says. "You are stewards of what you have. You don't take anything with you. You come here with nothing, and you leave here with nothing in reality. So, what's the good in hoarding it? Put it to good use."

"I look back and can see Bob Hartley, High Point University and James A. Thornton. When I got ready to go into business and didn't have enough money, I called James Thornton, who I played ball with for a few years — who sends a check every year to High Point University. I called him and said I need a few hundred thousand dollars, and he says you've got a partner. You hardly ever meet people like that in your life."

Although the University is the major beneficiary of Erath's philanthropy, it is certainly not the only organization he has supported with his time and money. He has served on boards of directors from the United Way to the North Carolina Shakespeare Festival to the Educational Foundation at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

University Board of Trustees member James H. Millis says Erath is a delight to work with.

"Mr. Erath is well-known, well-loved, and well-liked by, I think, everyone in the community," Millis says. "I think the University is so blessed to be able to have him to lead our University now and into the future. He has many friends."

"I've never heard a negative word about George Erath, and I just think we're blessed to have him as our leader working hand-in-hand with our president, Dr. Jake Martinson."

Supporting High Point University is a matter of pride, as well as obligation, Erath says.

"It's unbelievable the strides High Point University has made," he says.

"You don't own any of it," Erath says. "You are stewards of what you have. You don't take anything with you. You come here with nothing, and you leave here with nothing in reality. So, what's the good in hoarding it? Put it to good use."

"I remember my time at then High Point College as a fun time.

"I had a lot of fun and made a lot of friends. It was a good four-year experience that I just won't ever forget. And when I came back into town and got settled, I got involved with the Panther Club and all the things out there. It was just fun."

And Erath has done more than simply "get involved." In addition to serving as the chairman of the Board of Trustees, he also chairs the Founders Campaign, a $41 million drive slated to end in 1999.

As chairman of the University's Board of Trustees, George Erath '52 continues to go to bat for High Point University.

Erath serves on the Furniture Advisory Board and the Major Gifts Committee at the University.

It's Erath's friendship the University is most thankful to have, says University President Jacob C. Martinson.

"Whatever good we feel about

George, we feel about ourselves — he makes us feel good about ourselves," Martinson says. "George Erath has a great gift for friendship. Together with his lovely wife, Shirley, they have impacted our community like very few others have.

"His friendship is what makes him a most effective leader. You can't say 'no' to George. He is a perfect role model. He leads the way and others follow. He leads by example as well as by directive. We are very fortunate to have him as our Board Chairman."

High Point alumnus and trustee Nido R. Qubein agrees that Erath's leadership and ability to forge strategic alliances have proven vitally important to the University.

"High Point University is so fortunate to have the leadership of George Erath," Qubein says. "He has wisdom, experience, commitment and a true sense of stewardship.

"In his own calm but focused way, George ensures the continued mega success of his alma mater. He's one of a kind. A true statesman. I have a great deal of admiration for him."

High Point University is preparing for education in the 21st century. When the Founders Campaign ends in 1999, new buildings and programs will abound on campus, and Erath welcomes these changes.

"High Point University is kind of like a flower, and the weather has kept it from blooming to its full potential," he says. "It was a flower waiting to burst to its full beauty. It had to wait until someone came along and knew how to nurture it, and that's Jake Martinson."

Erath has spent a number of hours selling the idea of making contributions as a way of leaving a legacy — a symbol to those who follow that you meant something to the community and the community meant something to you. After all, the institutions you can count on continuing in the High Point community are the hospital and the University, he says.

But Erath is modest about his personal legacy.

"I'm not interested in that set of circumstances; just to have been part of it is enough for me," he says. "You try to instill in your children the importance of giving back— putting something back into the community. I hope I've done that with my children."

Like Erath Veneer, High Point University is a niche player. It finds the best way it can to reach people, and because of its size, it can offer many things other universities cannot, Erath says.

"Supporting High Point University is a matter of pride as well as obligation."

"I've been to the zoo," he says. "I know the difference between a lamb and a lion, and I know who the lamb is and who the lion is. If we compete with the (big companies), we'll go out of business. But because of our size, there's a lot of things we can do as a small company that you can't do as a big company.

"The same is true with High Point University. It is the epitome of what an education should be — direct dialogue between students and their professors."

The key to improvement is to increase alumni participation, Erath says.

"We should be continually raising the level of participation," he says. "The better we make High Point University, the more valuable your degree will be. Increased alumni participation will surely create the right set of circumstances for the University to flourish."

Carolina Container Gives the University $100,000

Carolina Container Co. established an endowed fund at High Point University to honor its former president, C.T. Ingram, Jr.

The $100,000 gift, honoring Phillips' 65 years with the company will support the projects, programs and faculty of the Earl N. Phillips School of Business.

University President Jacob C. Martinson said the University is honored to hold such an endowment.

"High Point University has been blessed by individual and corporate friendships throughout the years," Martinson said. "And this generous contribution by Carolina Container honoring our friend, C.T. Ingram, is another excellent example of business and education working together for the benefit of the community as a whole.

"Mr. Ingram has been a loyal supporter of the University, and we genuinely are honored to have an endowment that supports our School of Business and recognizes the achievement of this fine individual and organization."

Ingram began his stint at Carolina Container in 1931, and worked his way up to vice president in 1954 and eventually, president in 1974. In recent years, Ingram chaired the Board of Directors of the company.

President Martinson (r) receives a gift in support of the Earl N. Phillips Business School from I. Paul Ingle, Jr., (l) President and CEO of Carolina Container Company.

Furniture Building Proposed

The High Point University Furniture Marketing Advisory Board recently unveiled the plans for construction of a new classroom facility to serve the University's furniture program and the Earl N. Phillips School of Business.

The International School for Home Furnishings Marketing will house classrooms, faculty offices, two lecture rooms, and laboratories in support of the Interior Design Program. In addition, the 20,000 square-foot-facility will allocate space for a Furniture Hall of Fame and for a Furniture Library. The building will feature an atrium, capped by a vaulted ceiling on the third floor. Estimated cost of the project is approximately $3 million.

Hooker Furniture Establishes Scholarship

To honor John Clyde Hooker, Jr., the Hooker Furniture Corporation of Martinsville, Va. established a new fully endowed scholarship at High Point University.

The J. Clyde Hooker, Jr. Scholarship was created by contributions totaling $70,000 from Hooker's colleagues, employees and friends in honor of his 50th anniversary with the Hooker Furniture Corporation.

"It is so fitting that we endow a scholarship as a permanent and lasting tribute to J. Clyde Hooker, Jr.," said Paul B. Toms, Jr., executive vice president of marketing at Hooker Furniture. "Mr. Hooker always has been a strong proponent of education and personally has endowed several scholarships."

Students in the Home Furnishings Marketing Program at the University will benefit from the fund. Hooker Furniture chose High Point U. for the scholarship because of its contributions to the furniture industry, Toms said.

"We selected the Furniture Marketing Program at High Point University because of the tremendous service it provides to both the retail and manufacturing sectors in our industry," he said.

The University deemed it an honor to set up the endowment, said John C. Lefler, vice president for institutional advancement at the school.

"Our office has been showered with gifts and letters applauding the life and work of Mr. Hooker," Lefler said. "We are honored to have this fund to support our furniture marketing students, and we are proud to have the Hooker name affiliated with our institution."

Hooker, who began his career at Hooker Furniture in 1946, has made a distinct mark on the industry. He has garnered numerous awards such as the Pillar of the Industry Award from the International Home Furnishings Representatives Association and the James T. Ryan Award for Industry Leadership from the American Furniture Manufacturers Association.

Dear Friends:

The enthusiasm you have shown and success you have generated over the past three years have been overwhelming. You have helped us to accomplish a great deal in a short amount of time.

You have made it possible to:

- Kick off the largest fundraising endeavor in the University's history (The Founders Campaign);
- Raise $22.7 million toward a $41 million campaign goal;
- Increase alumni participation from 18 percent to over 25 percent (well above the national average);
- Increase dollars from alumni by 300 percent;
- Break numerous records in phonathon: $96,000 in 1993-1994 (an 800 percent increase over 1992-1993); $126,000 in 1994-1995; and over $135,000 in 1995-1996;
- Recognize our scholarship donors and their recipients at our first-ever scholarship luncheon; and
- Complete our first regional campaign in Charlotte, raising over $655,000 toward the Founders Campaign.

Most of all you have made your alma mater a better place by supporting it with your time, your ideas, and your generosity. High Point University could not grow without your support. You have made your institution increase in value. You are the reason for our success.

Fortunately, I have had the opportunity to meet many of you and never have I felt so welcomed. Yet, there comes a time when we are faced with decisions and often, decisions bring about change. With much deliberation, I have decided to pursue an opportunity in Development at Florida State University.

I leave High Point University, but take with me wonderful friendships and experiences that will last a lifetime. Toward that end, I know you will continue to grow High Point University and build upon that which is already strong.

I am blessed to have been a part of such a fine institution, part of a wonderful team, and to have been surrounded by such gracious people.

With sincere thanks,

Mary Lisabeth Strowd

Spring Sports Wrap-up: Panthers Dominate Conference

Cross Country cleans up ... again.

The Panthers ran over the competition again this year in Cross Country circles. The men won the Carolina-Virginia Athletic Conference (CVAC) Championship for the fourth consecutive year, and the women took the honors for the third consecutive year.

Head coach Bob Davidson garnered Conference Coach of the Year honors, and David Duggan and Elizabeth Young both were named CVAC Runner of the Year. Young and Duggan dominated conference honors by winning the individual championships as well as being named to the All-Conference team.

Christian Kell, Roby Chase, Daniel Doub and Shon Hildreth earned All-Conference honors for the men in addition to Duggan, and Geisa O'Reilly took home the honor for the women.

Women's Cross Country

Volleyball spikes competition

After posting a perfect 9-0 regular season conference record (20-9 overall), the Panthers were ungracious hosts in the CVAC Tournament.

The James H. and Jesse E. Millis Center played host to the CVAC tournament, and High Point University swept the competition by winning the title. Outside hitter Holly Hendley was named Tournament MVP in addition to gaining All-Conference honors.

Teresa Faucette, head coach of the Lady Panthers, racked up CVAC Coach of the Year honors. Lori Kuyenkendall and Tiffanie Wilson added to the honor tally by garnering All-Conference and All-Tournament teams. Rookie middle hitter Karah Hensley took Freshman of the Year.

Men's Soccer

Panther Soccer produces All-Tournament players

The women's soccer team finished third in the conference regular season only to lose in the finals of the conference tournament, posting an overall record of 12-6-2, (7-2-1 in the CVAC).

Senior striker Kristy Powell was not only named to the Conference All-Tournament team, but also took over the Panther record book, becoming the all-time leading goal scorer and tallying the most career points and games played.

Midfielder Kris Bowles earned All-Conference honors and a position on the All-South team. Deb Nichols and Laura Lamb were also named to the All-Conference team.

The men's team hosted this year's CVAC tournament. They finished eighth in the conference regular season posting a 3-5-2 CVAC record, 6-9-3, overall.

HPU Basketball has stellar year

- Panthers host first-ever CVAC tournament.
- After finishing first in the conference regular season, the men's basketball team earned a bid to the NCAA II South Regional Men's Basketball Tournament.
- The men finished with a 16-2 record in the conference (24-8 overall).
- Junior forward Brett Speight racked up CVAC Player of the Year honors in addition to being named to the NCAA All South Atlantic Regional team, the All-Conference team, the CVAC All-Tournament team and NCAA II honorable mention for All-American. Speight also tallied his 1000th career point during the season.
- Senior Mike Kirksey was also named to the All-Tournament team.
- Panther head coach Jerry Steele garnered CVAC Coach of the Year honors.
- The Lady Panthers took the conference championship for the second consecutive year, tallying a 16-2 conference record, 22-7 overall.
- Senior forward Greta Miles and sophomore guard Karen Curtis both reached the 1000 career point plateau this season. Curtis also tallied All-Conference and Tournament MVP honors.
- Guard Dee Pennix received Freshman of the Year honors as well as being named to the All-Tournament team.

Golf, Track make good showing: Baseball slides

- The men's golf team took second place in the CVAC tournament, advancing them to the NCAA Division II Regional Tournament.
- Charles Davis, the senior from Eureka, CA, was named to the CVAC All-Conference team.
- Although men's track is not a conference sport, the Panther quick feet made their mark in the State Meet by finishing third. Freshman Roby Chase won the 1500 meters. The Panthers posted an overall record of 14-5.
- The Panther baseball team finished ninth in the Conference regular season, finishing with a 6-18 CVAC record (11-29 overall).

Tennis Aces competition

- The Panther men's tennis team took first place in the conference regular season and the CVAC tournament, posting a perfect 10-0 record (17-1, overall).
- The record was good enough to earn a bid to the NCAA Division II Regional Tournament.
- Freshman Taavi Suorsa and Sophomore Kalle Kuusisto won Conference Championships in singles, and Kuusisto combined with Vincent Pulupa to take the championship at No. 2 doubles.
- Pulupa was named Freshman of the Year in the CVAC, and to the All-Conference team. Suorsa and Pekka Pohjamo were also included on the CVAC All-Conference team.
- Head coach Jerry Tertzagian was named Coach of the Year honors.
- The women's team finished third in the conference regular season and sixth in the CVAC tournament posting a 7-3 conference record, 15-4 overall.
