Racing to the head of the track

By Jesse Kizer

Sophomore Matt Dusenberry, 19, is finding out what it takes to follow his dream of racing for a living: hard work, networking and a college education.

Matt’s start in racing is unusual. “Typically most kids have a dad who is a mechanic,” says Matt. But Matt’s dad was the CEO of Hasbro Interactive, a video game manufacturer. When Matt’s dad started creating the NASCAR Heat video game in 1999, Matt got the amazing opportunity to attend the drivers’ meeting in London, N.H., a NASCAR Nextel-Cup track. He sat next to the late Dale Earnhardt Sr. and Jeff Gordon, two of the most successful drivers at that time. “I got into it from then on,” says Matt.

Matt’s parents entered him into the F-1 Boston go-cart racing school where he went on to win the New England karting championship in his first year.

From then on the sky was the limit. The next year Matt got behind the steering wheel of a mini-cup, a scaled-down version of a Nextel-Cup car. After winning “rookie of the year” at Seekonk Speedway in Massachusetts, Matt moved to the street stock division and had a full time crew chief. “I learned great traffic management [in street stock],” says Matt. But the season was cut short for Matt due to the start of school.

Next for Matt is a big leap to Late Model class at Seekonk. “I learned how to handle a big high horsepower car with longer races and how much things as traffic management are important,” he says. Matt got a small feel for these races with running in the ACT tour (American Canadian Tour) at a few of his local tracks. “I’m now at a point in my career to run a complete tour,” he says. This summer Matt plans to run a full season in a tour with his late model. This next step will be into the Craftsman Truck series with help from many people. “It’s all about networking,” says Matt. He has received help from many important people in racing and a few that have nothing to do with racing. Jeff Bickford, for example, is Jeff Gordon’s stepfather and president of Gordon Inc. Bickford gave Matt a lot of great advice such as the importance of a college education in the advancing sport of racing.

“Being a college graduate is very beneficial for a racecar driver in this day and age, it’s a common misconception that it’s not,” says Matt. Bickford also believes that all the big winners of Nextel Cup in 2010 and 2011 will be college grads due to the increasing sophistication of the sport.

Along with Bickford, Matt has help from President Nido Qubein, “Because racing is so expensive, Nido has taught me how to raise money for my dream,” Matt says. “I was the CEO of Hasbro Interactive, a video game manufacturer, when Matt’s dad started creating the NASCAR Heat video game in 1999, Matt got the amazing opportunity to attend the drivers’ meeting in London, N.H., a NASCAR Nextel-Cup track. He sat next to the late Dale Earnhardt Sr. and Jeff Gordon, two of the most successful drivers at that time. “I got into it from then on,” says Matt.

Matt’s parents entered him into the F-1 Boston go-cart racing school where he went on to win the New England karting championship in his first year. The next year Matt got behind the steering wheel of a mini-cup, a scaled-down version of a Nextel-Cup car. After winning “rookie of the year” at Seekonk Speedway in Massachusetts, Matt moved to the street stock division and had a full time crew chief. “I learned great traffic management [in street stock],” says Matt. But the season was cut short for Matt due to the start of school.

Next for Matt is a big leap to Late Model class at Seekonk. “I learned how to handle a big high horsepower car with longer races and how much things as traffic management are important,” he says. Matt got a small feel for these races with running in the ACT tour (American Canadian Tour) at a few of his local tracks. “I’m now at a point in my career to run a complete tour,” he says. This summer Matt plans to run a full season in a tour with his late model. This next step will be into the Craftsman Truck series with help from many people. “It’s all about networking,” says Matt. He has received help from many important people in racing and a few that have nothing to do with racing. Jeff Bickford, for example, is Jeff Gordon’s stepfather and president of Gordon Inc. Bickford gave Matt a lot of great advice such as the importance of a college education in the advancing sport of racing. Bickford also believes that all the big winners of Nextel Cup in 2010 and 2011 will be college grads due to the increasing sophistication of the sport. Along with Bickford, Matt has help from President Nido Qubein, “Because racing is so expensive, Nido has taught me how to raise money for my dream,” Matt says.

In this issue:

- Page 3 The stereotypical guy category
- Page 5 Students appear in television pilot
- Page 6 Annual Greek Week festivities to begin
- Page 8 Wilsons keep it in the family

See Dusenberry, page 5

Store owner accommodates to the competition

By Brian Nicholas

Jerry Whiteley has a master’s degree in accounting, but with his tattooed jeans, old T-shirt and worn baseball cap, he looks more like a musician than a tax expert.

Whiteley co-owns Smith Whiteley Music, a small and unassuming musical instrument store with a hometown feel that you rarely find in a business anymore. Rows of guitars hang so closely on the walls that they resemble wind chimes, and it seems that one gust of wind might elicit a song. A glass counter runs the length of one side of the store that has seen years of musicians come and go, while the other side holds well-used practice rooms, where hours of sweat and the sweet smell of rock dreams fill the room. A stream of 15-year-olds, instruments in hand, struts from the rooms to waiting parents, a sense of accomplishment in their eyes.

Whiteley understands the hardships of running a local business but swears that
Senior welcomes changes but finds attitudes grating

By Patrick Donovan

The topic of change seems to be a constant at High Point University. There have been obvious changes such as the construction of new buildings, the various small things such as the actual kiosk outside of Finch Hall the quotes in the walkways.

Now, before I start, I'm going to clear the air as far as what I'm going to say. Change itself is a good thing. It's necessary for change to occur for anything to survive, including a University.

However, on this issue of the changes taking place around what will, in May, become my alma mater, I'm torn. You see, on the one hand, I'm actually quite happy with what's going down. I think it gives credit to the foundation and in turn, hope to have to have in May. The school's reputation is going through the roof. The living conditions for all classes starting to rise, enrollment is off the charts and the campus itself looks amazing. Compared to last year, the school has a completely different environment, with statues, fountains, new furniture. It's staggering. People actually know that High Point University exists now.

However, I can't help but feel a tad学术化. Don't get me wrong, when you look like I do, it's not uncommon to be on the fringe a bit. However, the sense of community that is being extended doesn't seem to extend to me as much as to others. Granted, I attribute part of my feeling to my personality which at times can be quite abrasive. This, however, is something different. It's not so much about fitting in. Rather, it's about standing out. It's not so much about being in. Rather, it's about being out. It's about being on the fringe a bit. However, the sense of community that is being extended doesn't seem to extend to me as much as to others. Granted, I attribute part of my feeling to my personality which at times can be quite abrasive. This, however, is something different.

My opinion on the matter, is that I can suffer a bit to have a degree that sets me apart a few years down the road. If the words of the top of my little piece of paper get me a better job than someone else's with a different set of words, so be it. I am going to enjoy it while I'm here. Patrick Donovan.
Finding unity in common faith

By Ericka Norris
Staff Writer

As many of you know, there is a Christian group on facebook called Our Divine Unity. This group was formed in early October in Hampton, Va. Our Divine Unity exists at 12 other schools and each school has its own leadership. Carnai Simpson, a senior, is our leader. Our Divine Unity is designed to “encourage and motivate college students,” says Carnai. This group gives students daily words of wisdom and encouragement. All students are welcomed into the group and everyone is encouraged to share their positive experiences. Our Divine Unity is planning activities now.

Every Wednesday night at 6:30, bible study is held in Blessing Hall. Carnai Simpson and Pam Foxe, the resident directors of Blessing, lead bible study each week. Many students attend on Wednesdays and learn more about the word of God. Carnai says Our Divine Unity allows “Christian students to fellowship.” Our Divine Unity has many plans in the works and is in the process of starting a website that offers more encouraging words.

Different events are being planned in order to enhance Christian fellowship. Weekly bible studies are just half of what’s to come. Thursday is movie night,-bornights and Christian plays that will be taking place this academic year. Senior Sean Caldwell says “I am excited as I would like to see bible study continue after graduation.” There has been a lack of fellowship opportunities and few things for Christian students to do in the past. Our Divine Unity has changed that.

Activities fair brings local businesses

The High Point Campus Chronicle now accepting submissions for next issue. Please send your articles, letters and advertisements to news@highpoint.edu by noon on Oct. 20.

Straight Talk from Dr. Qubein

Dearest Students,

History books and entertainment magazines are full of examples of people whose careers soared while their lives crashed — even as they were doing the things they enjoyed and did best.

If a person’s behavior is not in line with their desires and they are on a set of principles grounded in positive personal values, the result can be disastrous.

Don’t worry ... I’m not going to give you a set of rules to tell you what you can and can’t do with your life. You can — and should — write your own rules, based on the principles you cherish. This is a concept taught in the President’s Seminar on Life Skills, and is one I hold in high regard. It is so focal to HPU’s mission of preparing young people for success in life that it warrants a quick overview. Please take this charge seriously and make it part of your life.

A value is something you hold dear; a principle is a broad, fundamental truth; a rule of conduct is a guide to behavior designed to implement a principle. An example of each:

A moral example:

* "Lifeman life in a value.
* "It is wrong to take human life deliberately and maliciously” is a principle.
* "Thou shalt not commit murder” is a rule of conduct.

The principle supports the value, the rule of conduct implements the principle. Therefore, what you value determines the principles by which you measure your behavior.

Sound principles are based on your rock-bottom assessment of what is right. They represent your perception of the way things ought to be in relation to your values. If you want to be truly happy, direct your efforts toward bringing your life into harmony with the way things ought to be.

All the talent and knowledge in the world will not bring you happiness if it is not applied in harmony with this perception of the way things should be. Applying your talents and education without reference to your values and principles is like using your car’s accelerator without touching the steering wheel ... it may take you far and fast, but it probably won’t take you where you want to go. And it may take you over a cliff or into a brick wall.

Most of us see life like a split image viewed through the focusing lens of a camera. One image represents reality; the other represents the way things ought to be in relation to your values.

Life is what you make it. Go for it. Reach for the stars.

We are so happy you are a part of the HPU family.

President Nido R. Qubein
aquein@highpoint.edu
Director seeks answers in Superman's strange death

By Amanda Roberts
Editor in Chief

Friday, September 29, 2006

Suicide. Or was it cold-blooded murder? That is the question haunting Louis Simo (Adrien Brody) in "Hollywoodland" as he investigates the death of George Reeves (Ben Affleck).

Set in the 1950s, "Hollywoodland" catches a glimpse of the dazzle and darkness pervading this era of Director Allen Coulter alternates the present moment—investigating the death with—the backstory of Reeves.

The transitions are virtufully seamless. The screenplay is artistically written, allowing the talent of the actors to shine.

Affleck, Brody and Dana Lac {L}screen in their roles. Lane portrays Tom Mannix, wife of the general manager of MGM Edgar Mannix, who earns a long-term affair with Reeves. Each of the actors (yes, even Affleck) brings a credible portrayal of their roles.

Multi-faceted, Brody as Louis Simo deals with several internal conflicts. He hires himself out generally to men who suspect their spouses are cheating on them; the death of Reeves intri

Mars Volta ‘incridibly inventive'; Mayer’s new album is nice and easy

By Lauren Croughan
Staff Writer

Papa Roach—The Paramour Sessions

Reminiscent of the group’s past album, The Paramour Sessions is fast-paced and completely high energy. Yeah, there are a couple of touching songs, but overall it makes you want to jump and jam. The first track released is their new hit, “To Be Loved,” which he would use to jump and jam. The first track released is their new hit, “To Be Loved,” which he would use to jump and jam. The first track released is their new hit, “To Be Loved,” which he would use to jump and jam.

Mars Volta’s “All Roaches” is destined to become a classic in the nu-metal genre. With the team’s previous releases out with Edgar Mannix (Bob Hoskins) and his mistress—the tension between the characters is deliciously palpable.

Who could have murdered Reeves? The greedy fiances? The jilted lover? The jealous husband? Or could it have been suicide after all?

The core conflict becomes the struggle between truth—and survival.

Final Grade-A-

Emerywood Fine Foods: great dishes and fair prices deserve 4 out of 5 whisks

By Nikkii Neu
Staff Writer

When I step into Emerywood Fine Foods test kitchen, I know immediately that I am stepping out of the busy, average life of High Point and into a fresh, modern hideaway on one of the most charming streets in town.

The trendy atmosphere is refreshingly understated. The decor is warmed with the thematic green wall on one side and bamboo window shades on the other. It’s a mixture of modern decor and art deco.

One of the first things I find appealing about this place is the attentiveness the server shows the customer. A friendly waitstaff comes to take my order and automatically fills my water glass. The entire establishment is held by the manager to finish their dish. These things make dining a little more enjoyable and a little less chain restaurant, "eats as we get out" mentality.

In fact, Emerywood is the ant-chaick for those of you who are as sick of a cooked-to-death, mediocre piece of meat referred to on the menu as a "steak." Oh, and FYI, at Emerywood you can still eat good in your neighborhood, it’s located just past Main Street on Lexington Ave.

Bearing a repeat customer, I have some favorites that I have introduced over the years. "The Rose Heart," which is roast beef with provolone and caramelized onions and the "To First or Not To Brie," which is brie and smoked turkey on baguette, are two of my favorite sandwiches. I also am a big fan of the daily soups, which are creative and flavorful. On this particular visit I ordered the potato, mushroom and lentil soup—simply delicious. For dessert the vegetable ravioli in a leak cream sauce is absolutely fabulous, understated and yet pleasantly seasoned.

I know what you’re thinking: any restaurant with “fine foods” in the name is unaffordable for our "if it’s not a bargain, it’s not worth it" mentality. But I assure you at Emerywood, there are some dishes that are relatively cheap. For instance, the vegetable ravioli in a leek cream sauce is absolutely fabulous, understated yet pleasantly seasoned.

There are no bargains, but I have to say that this is one of the most enjoyable and flavorful meals that I have had in a long time. Emerywood Fine Foods deserves 4 out of 5 whisks.

Emerywood Fine Foods is located at 400 Lexington Ave. In the heart of downtown High Point.

Final Grade-B-

Emerywood Fine Foods is destined to become a classic in the catalog of Tom Petty’s albums. The album kicks off with “Saving Grace,” an up-tempo blues shuffle that could wipe the smirk off Billy Gibbons’ face. This is followed by “Square One,” a down-tempo acoustic ditty about wiping the slate clean.

The rest of the album is in total Tom Petty fashion, a colorful narrative about America. The title of the album is apt: a good fit considering the album would make an excellent selection when taking off on a cross-country trip. With Mike Campbell’s smooth guitar playing and Tom Petty’s storytelling genius, this album has been destined to become a classic in the catalog of Tom Petty.

This restaurant gets 4 out of 5 whisks.

Final Grade-B+

I have concocted a filler.

Final Grade-A+

This is a band that has gone through some tough times, right before this album dropped, they were on the verge of breaking up. Yet, with just as much force as their previous two albums, Volta’s avant-garde tension and guitar riffs are more powerful than colleague System of the Down. They describe the album as inspired by the hands of time haven’t touched the Heartbreakers’ tight vibe. They just so happened to be celebrating their 30th anniversary that night. Mike Campbell’s solos flowed just as they did on their self-titled debut.

Among the multitude of classic songs he played were “Free Fallin’,” “Won’t Back Down,” and “Mary Jane’s Last Dance.” He also played several songs off Highway Companion, including “Saving Grace” and “Big Weekend,” and he dedicated the song “Down South” to the crowd because we were in the South. Because it was my first time seeing Tom Petty, it was certainly nice to sing along to songs that I have known for years and those that I had only known for a few weeks.

One of the things that particularly intrigued me about Tom Petty was the way that after each song he would make it a habit to say, “Thank you so much. You’re so sweet.” To the audience. He must have repeated that line at least 15 times.

Finally all, the concert and the new album definitely get an A+ from this lifelong listener.
Friday, September 29, 2006

Phoenix changes aim to make the day special for High Point students

By Rebecca Fleming

Autumn is upon us: classes are well underway, and papers and tests are beginning to show up with more frequency. And there is a buzz heard on campus concerning changes to a time-honored tradition of the English department. On Friday, Nov. 17, the Phoenix Festival will be held for the thirty-sixth time, and there are some big changes in the works. Ms. Georgeanna Sellers and Dr. Isaksen of the English department have spent a lot of time thinking of changes intended to make the day special for High Point students.

Returning students may remember that, traditionally, Phoenix has been a Friday off from classes (all English, and anything else held in Cooke), while campus was swamped with high-for High Point students. HPU'ers who submitted poems and short fiction were a definite minority and encouragement to students, but this Phoenix Festival is featuring two speakers and workshop leaders and returned to students after the Festival.

In addition, the Thursday night IDS/Phoenix event has been canceled, and two sessions on Friday are eligible for IDS credit. The reading at 9 a.m. and noon/awards ceremony at 1 p.m. will be open for the general University audience, and students can receive IDS credit for attending either or both of them. All of these changes have been made for the “sole reason of getting all HPU students involved,” says Isaksen. The Phoenix Festival is open to all High Point students who would like to participate, from any department. Everything possible will be done to help participants attend the Master Class and/or the whole Festival, just ask Ms. Sellers or Dr. Isaksen in the English department for what classes you would be missing. Check out the post on the campus website and get a feel for her genius and how to do it well.”

The Phoenix Festival is open for the first time ever, the Phoenix Festival is featuring two speakers — mother-daughter duo Penelope and Jennifer Niven. By bringing in two speakers, the English department is not only able to offer twice the inspiration and encouragement to students, but this also allows High Point students to have more direct communication with the featured speaker(s). While Penelope Niven (author of numerous books about poet Carl Sandburg) will be meeting with the high school English teachers — as is the custom — daughter Jennifer will be holding a Master Class for High Point participants.

According to Sellers, the Master Class will be “an exclusive workshop with an Emmy-winning screenwriter, Jennifer knows everything there is to know [about writing] and how to do it well.” The Master Class is only open to High Point students who submit writing — either poetry or short fiction, or both — in accordance with submission guidelines available in the English department. The session with Jennifer will focus on the students and their writing and promises to be well worth an hour of your time. Submissions will still be critiqued by workshop leaders.

For the first time ever, the Phoenix Festival is featuring two speakers — mother-daughter duo Penelope and Jennifer Niven. By bringing in two speakers, the English department is not only able to offer twice the inspiration and encouragement to students, but this also allows High Point students to have more direct communication with the featured speaker(s). While Penelope Niven (author of numerous books about poet Carl Sandburg) will be meeting with the high school English teachers — as is the custom — daughter Jennifer will be holding a Master Class for High Point participants.

By Pam Haynes

Senior Matt Cothran and juniors Yolanda Martinez and Shannon Moran sampled the television production industry as they interned on the set of a local TV pilot called "Barflies" filmed at Club Triangle.

"It was supposed to be a cross between "Sex and the City" and "Cheers," except with all girls instead of girls," Martinez commented about the script.

The director, Michael Hayworth, who is also the grandson of the Hayworth family for whom Michael Hayworth, who is also the grandson of the Hayworth family for whom Yolanda Martinez and Shannon Moran have spent a lot of time thinking of changes intended to make the day special for High Point students.

Returning students may remember that, traditionally, Phoenix has been a Friday off from classes (all English, and anything else held in Cooke), while campus was swamped with high-for High Point students. HPU'ers who submitted poems and short fiction were a definite minority and encouragement to students, but this Phoenix Festival is featuring two speakers and workshop leaders and returned to students after the Festival.

In addition, the Thursday night IDS/Phoenix event has been canceled, and two sessions on Friday are eligible for IDS credit. The reading at 9 a.m. and noon/awards ceremony at 1 p.m. will be open for the general University audience, and students can receive IDS credit for attending either or both of them. All of these changes have been made for the “sole reason of getting all HPU students involved,” says Isaksen. The Phoenix Festival is open to all High Point students who would like to participate, from any department. Everything possible will be done to help participants attend the Master Class and/or the whole Festival, just ask Ms. Sellers or Dr. Isaksen in the English department for what classes you would be missing. Check out the post on the campus website and get a feel for her genius and how to do it well.”

The Phoenix Festival is open for the first time ever, the Phoenix Festival is featuring two speakers — mother-daughter duo Penelope and Jennifer Niven. By bringing in two speakers, the English department is not only able to offer twice the inspiration and encouragement to students, but this also allows High Point students to have more direct communication with the featured speaker(s). While Penelope Niven (author of numerous books about poet Carl Sandburg) will be meeting with the high school English teachers — as is the custom — daughter Jennifer will be holding a Master Class for High Point participants.

According to Sellers, the Master Class will be “an exclusive workshop with an Emmy-winning screenwriter, Jennifer knows everything there is to know [about writing] and how to do it well.” The Master Class is only open to High Point students who submit writing — either poetry or short fiction, or both — in accordance with submission guidelines available in the English department. The session with Jennifer will focus on the students and their writing and promises to be well worth an hour of your time. Submissions will still be critiqued by workshop leaders.

For the first time ever, the Phoenix Festival is featuring two speakers — mother-daughter duo Penelope and Jennifer Niven. By bringing in two speakers, the English department is not only able to offer twice the inspiration and encouragement to students, but this also allows High Point students to have more direct communication with the featured speaker(s). While Penelope Niven (author of numerous books about poet Carl Sandburg) will be meeting with the high school English teachers — as is the custom — daughter Jennifer will be holding a Master Class for High Point participants.

According to Sellers, the Master Class will be “an exclusive workshop with an Emmy-winning screenwriter, Jennifer knows everything there is to know [about writing] and how to do it well.” The Master Class is only open to High Point students who submit writing — either poetry or short fiction, or both — in accordance with submission guidelines available in the English department. The session with Jennifer will focus on the students and their writing and promises to be well worth an hour of your time. Submissions will still be critiqued by workshop leaders.

For the first time ever, the Phoenix Festival is featuring two speakers — mother-daughter duo Penelope and Jennifer Niven. By bringing in two speakers, the English department is not only able to offer twice the inspiration and encouragement to students, but this also allows High Point students to have more direct communication with the featured speaker(s). While Penelope Niven (author of numerous books about poet Carl Sandburg) will be meeting with the high school English teachers — as is the custom — daughter Jennifer will be holding a Master Class for High Point participants.

According to Sellers, the Master Class will be “an exclusive workshop with an Emmy-winning screenwriter, Jennifer knows everything there is to know [about writing] and how to do it well.” The Master Class is only open to High Point students who submit writing — either poetry or short fiction, or both — in accordance with submission guidelines available in the English department. The session with Jennifer will focus on the students and their writing and promises to be well worth an hour of your time. Submissions will still be critiqued by workshop leaders.

For the first time ever, the Phoenix Festival is featuring two speakers — mother-daughter duo Penelope and Jennifer Niven. By bringing in two speakers, the English department is not only able to offer twice the inspiration and encouragement to students, but this also allows High Point students to have more direct communication with the featured speaker(s). While Penelope Niven (author of numerous books about poet Carl Sandburg) will be meeting with the high school English teachers — as is the custom — daughter Jennifer will be holding a Master Class for High Point participants.

According to Sellers, the Master Class will be “an exclusive workshop with an Emmy-winning screenwriter, Jennifer knows everything there is to know [about writing] and how to do it well.” The Master Class is only open to High Point students who submit writing — either poetry or short fiction, or both — in accordance with submission guidelines available in the English department. The session with Jennifer will focus on the students and their writing and promises to be well worth an hour of your time. Submissions will still be critiqued by workshop leaders.

For the first time ever, the Phoenix Festival is featuring two speakers — mother-daughter duo Penelope and Jennifer Niven. By bringing in two speakers, the English department is not only able to offer twice the inspiration and encouragement to students, but this also allows High Point students to have more direct communication with the featured speaker(s). While Penelope Niven (author of numerous books about poet Carl Sandburg) will be meeting with the high school English teachers — as is the custom — daughter Jennifer will be holding a Master Class for High Point participants.

According to Sellers, the Master Class will be “an exclusive workshop with an Emmy-winning screenwriter, Jennifer knows everything there is to know [about writing] and how to do it well.” The Master Class is only open to High Point students who submit writing — either poetry or short fiction, or both — in accordance with submission guidelines available in the English department. The session with Jennifer will focus on the students and their writing and promises to be well worth an hour of your time. Submissions will still be critiqued by workshop leaders.
Don't complain that there's nothing to do on campus

By Mike Nuckles
Sports Editor

Construction delays have caused students to have seemingly few places to gather on campus to meet new people, converse with friends or eat a meal.

The addition to the Slane Student Center is still incomplete. With construction set to conclude later this fall, students still have several options which go relatively unused.

Sports on the Promenade

From time to time, one will see students playing ultimate Frisbee or football on the International Promenade. This scenic part of High Point's campus is almost always open for anyone to do what they want.

The University Park

Phase One of the new University Park is complete and with it a beautiful amphitheater, a perfect place to go to study, hang out with friends or take a bite to eat with you.

The Park, right next to Norcross Hall, is a scenic area of campus with Frisbee golf, beaches, the amphitheater and many tall trees to give its majestic effect.

Panther Athletics

The majority of High Point's athletic complexes are large enough to seat the school's entire traditional undergraduate population. Despite that, fewer than 100 students typically attend fall sporting events.

Volleyball games provide high-energy, fast-paced action, complete with high-quality audio amplification and the new digital scoreboard and Jumbotron.

Soccer games are hosted at the brand new Vert Stadium. Recently, the men's team tied a nationally ranked Elon squad in a game hosted at Vert Stadium. Recently, the men's team tied a nationally ranked Elon squad in a game hosted at Vert Stadium.

Cross country meets rarely attract any kind of student crowd. Despite the quickness of the event (typically 30 minutes or fewer) there can be very exciting, close finishes. Recently, a High Point men's relay team defeated teams from Atlantic Coast Conference foes Duke, Virginia Tech and Wake Forest.

"Having Panther pride is the best thing about going to the games," senior Jay Whisenant said.

Slane Student Center Patio

One of the most underestimated feature of campus is the second story of Slane. Whether you want to study at one of the outdoor furniture areas or sit back and relax on the hammock, Slane has much to offer students, even before the addition is complete.

"I like to go up to Slane just to go there and talk." freshman Scott Huddleston.

Student Life

If you have a weekend free, a night on your own or nowhere to go with your friends, head over to the third story of the Student Center, where you can find listings of all of the upcoming campus events. The Student Life office is located in the central part of the building next to the Great Room.

"I like participating in Student Life events because I like being involved in campus life and feeling the sense of community that High Point has," freshman Randy Cloncy said.

Athletic Facilities and Intramurals

A common setting to get to know your fellow students is the sports field. The Student Center's addition will include several updated facilities for student recreation, but the majority of these opportunities exist at other locations right now. Like running? Instead of waiting for the new indoor track, find the numerous paths around campus on a sunny morning.

Is soccer more your thing? The practice field just below the baseball stadium is usually available for student use. The teams counts adjacent to the Millis Center are also usually open for students.

Many campus intramurals are also beginning now or soon. Intramural sports are either team- or individual-oriented and are available in many sports. For more information, contact David Duggan at Slane 101.

Word on the Street

Each month, the Campus Chronicle staff works hard to bring students what they want and need to see in the paper. To find out what kind of stories are most anticipated, students were asked which part of the paper they found most enjoyable.

What's your favorite part of the Campus Chronicle to read?

Ashley Russell, Senior:
"Opinion because I think it gives people a good view of how we feel about things on campus."

Ian McCormick, Junior:
"I like the humorous features because I find them interesting."

Wayne Rampone, Senior:
"I like the opinion section because I like to hear what other students think about things on campus and current events."

Marla Singleton, Senior:
"I go straight for news and pictures because I'm a visual person, and I'm busy without a lot of time to read."

Dr. David Bergen, chair of the Human Relations department:
"I like the student editorials because I think it's important to hear from students about politics, world concerns, campus issues and life in general."

---

Greek Week promotes healthy competition, camaraderie

By Brittany Bollier
Greek Editor

Do you need a break from class? Are you interested in a good laugh? Well you're in luck. It's that time of the year once again when the Greeks battle head-to-head in hilarious competition in order to be crowned Greek week champions.

Greek Week is a celebration to promote Greek unity and friendship on campus. Each organization is paired with another organization to create a team. This year's teams are as follows: Alpha Kappa Alpha and Alpha Chi Omega, Alpha Gamma Delta and Pi Kappa Alpha, Delta Sigma Theta and Kappa Alpha Psi, Kappa Delta and Theta Chi, Phi Mu and Delta Sigma Phi, Zeta Tau Alpha and Lambda Chi Alpha.

The competition will kick off on Sunday, October 1 with the annual Crop Walk, which raises money to feed the hungry, is open to the High Point community. Also on Sunday are the volleyball games, which will be held in the Millis Athletic/Convocation Center at 7 p.m.

Each team has a theme. The themes are not revealed until Monday morning when the team banners are displayed on campus. The tug of war and kickball competitions will be held on Monday at 4:30 p.m. as well. On Tuesday, each team will participate in the tug of war. This event requires each team to designate bowlers. Then each team must support their bowlers wearing toga's made from various materials.

On Wednesday everyone is invited to attend the worship service at 5:30 in the Hayworth Chapel, which will be hosted by Panhellicens. Finally, on Thursday the major event - the lip sync competition!

Throughout the week each team creates dances to numerous songs which coordinate with our theme."

Inauguration, Alumni and Parent Weekend set to begin next week

Selected Schedule of Events

Wednesday, Oct. 4: Chapel Service at 5:30 p.m.
Thursday, Oct. 5: Student Research Symposium, Hayworth Fine Arts, 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.
Friday, Oct. 6: HPU Open Golf Tournament, Oak Hollow Golf Course, 8:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.
Candlelight Dinner, Cafe
4:30 p.m.-7 p.m.
Ryan Oakes, Conjurer, Hayworth Fine Arts
Saturday, Oct. 7: Inauguration Ceremony, Roberts Hall Lawn, 11 a.m.
Picnic and Music on the Promenade, 12:30 p.m.
Men's Soccer vs. Birmingham-Southern, 3:00 p.m.
Concert and Snacks, Roberts Hall Lawn, 7 p.m.
Sunday, Oct. 8: Chapel Service at 11 a.m.
Volleyball vs. Birmingham-Southern at 2 p.m.
Women's soccer team wins

The High Point University men's soccer team is ready for the fall season, despite their most recent loss at Campbell where the Panthers fell 3-1. After going 1-1-1 in the Big South last season, it seems that the team has nowhere to go but up. And up is exactly what this year's season holds. At the start of the season, the team has the majority of its scoring and looking back, only losing two seniors. Two of the nine returning starters are Victor Harrison and Daniel Walsh who represent the team as this season's captains. Six promising freshmen add some new talent to the mix, as head coach Peter Broadley boasts one of best recruiting classes in his nine seasons at HPU.

"Personally, I learned a lot," says sophomore defender, Michael Earman. "It was a difficult year last season. We had some tough losses, but we have a lot of talent and hopefully freshmen on the team this year will ease into the team. We're going to have a better season."

These powerful words are not only hotly believed by the Panthers but are also very much believed by their opponent as Archer, Babou and Fidelden slid the ball into the net. Making their first appearance at the Track & Soccer Stadium on Sept. 8. The Panthers came home from this game satisfied with the 4-0 result.

"Tonight was a very good team effort," said Coach Peter Broadley after the Longwood game. "I'm really pleased that the team was able to pick up its first win of the season."

The win over Longwood is a sign of things to come. The Panthers opened the season with a 4-0 shutout of VMI to start the fall season. The team lost only one game in the fall season and hopes to continue their winning ways into the spring.

The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already begun. The men traveled to Raleigh to play in the NC State Tournament on Sept. 5-7. "The fall season has already beg
Kovacs, Burt lead teams to Old North State Collegiate titles

By Mike Nuckles
Sports Editor

International students Kali Burt and Tanasi Kovacs, both sophomores, each ran a team-best individual finish at the Guilford College-hosted Old North State Collegiate Championships at Hagan Shire Park in Greensboro. The individual times helped clinch team victories for both men’s and women’s teams.

Women’s cross country

Kovacs, a 20-year-old senior from Athens, Greece, has finished in the top 25 of each of the first two meets this season. His 26:05 8K time at the Lou Onesty Invitational in Livingston, Texas, marked his third top ten finish in three races this early in the season. His 26:05 8K time comes after a victory in the Sept. 1 Small College 8K at the Guilford College-hosted Old North State Collegiate Championships at Hagan Shire Park in Greensboro. The individual times helped clinch team victories for both men’s and women’s teams.

Younger brother Ryan, a sophomore human relations-marketing major, said, “I chose High Point University because it was close to home and I was offered a good scholarship.” Ryan added, “I would like to pursue golf as a career as far as little bit, but they did it very unselfishly for the team. Packing running was the plan for the men, too. They did their best through 5K. We’re literally holding Tanasi and a couple others back, but that’s a way you can help down the road,” Esposito said.

In Sept. 22’s Lou Onesty Invitational both the men’s and women’s teams faced Big South foe Liberty for their first conference matchup of the year. Despite High Point’s positive finishes for their first conference matchup this season, High Point met Duke, Virginia Tech and Wake Forest in Winston-Salem on Sept. 1 and Virginia on Sept. 22. Wake Forest also competed at Old North State. The teams next meet action tonight at tonight’s 3rd Annual Paul Short Run on the campus of Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pa., where the teams should meet some tough Big South contenders.

When asked about their favorite professional golfer is Tiger Woods. When asked about their favorite professional golfer, both men’s and women’s teams. The teams next meet action tonight at tonight’s 3rd Annual Paul Short Run on the campus of Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pa., where the teams should meet some tough Big South competitors. Chase and Ryan Wilson have made names for themselves here at High Point University and in the High Point area with their great golf. In closing Chase said, “I am looking forward to this coming season. We have the strongest team yet, I believe, from the last four years.”