PROPERTY OF THE HIGH POINT COLLEGE LIBRARY HIGH POINT, NORTH CAROLINA Zenith we have endeavored to leave with our classmates in some form, memories of the days which they have spent in school.

It is our greatest hope that some day you will be able to find a solace in this book. If this be accomplished, we feel that our work has not been in vain.

Do one, who by his generous sacrifices and loyal support typifies the large part that the people of High Point have had in the making of our college, we wish to express our appreciation. He is a leader in the industry of our city, a man respected and loved by everyone and an insipiration to young people seeking an education. As a measure of our gratitude and admiration we consider ourselves honored in dedicating this the eighth edition of the Zenith to

Mr. C. C. Robbins

A few years ago High Point staged an elaborate Pageant of Progress, which was photographed and written about in moving picture weeklies and newspapers throughout the United States. A strange feature about this pageant was that many costumes and carriages, coaches and other ancient equipages used were found in the community; in fact there were actors that took part who could remember nearly every epoch from slave days until the present time.

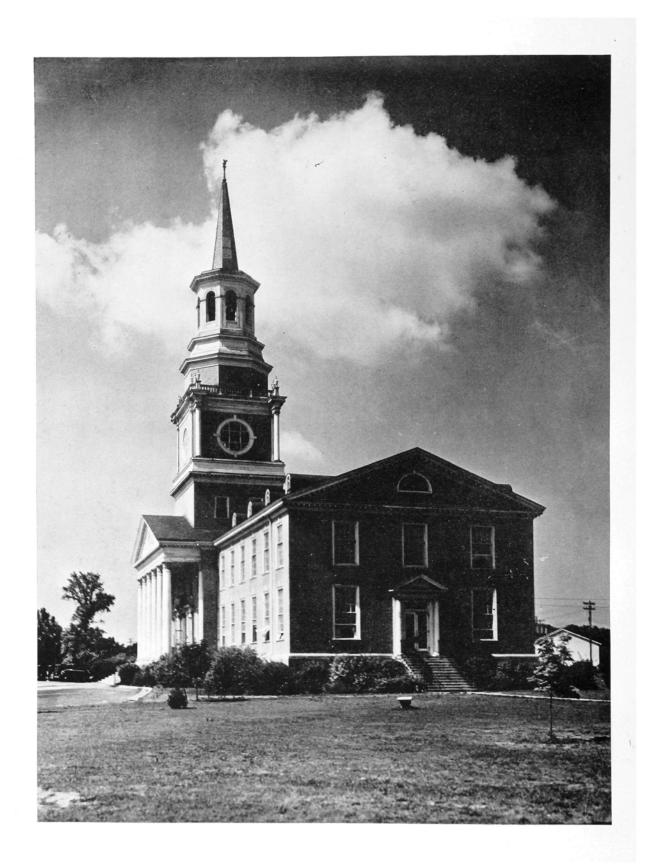

APID progress — progress that you can see and almost feel is the progress of High Point and the richly developing Piedmont district which surrounds it. Nowhere in the entire Southland is a pageant of industrial and modern community development being more sanely nor more soundly progressive today. Take for example the city of fifty years ago. A typical post-war community of some few hundred people, growing their tobacco and cotton by primitive methods.

HESE people gathered around the crossroads store in High Point to see the local come in and the stage pass over the old plank road to the North and South. High Point was so named because it was the highest point on the original North Carolina Railroad, which ran from Goldsboro to Charlotte. Today this road is a section of the double track main line of the great Southern System—Washington to New Orleans.

False Face Men

Hear that laugh? See that smile? Sure—they're meant with all sincerity. Gee, doesn't that guy act tough, And that one ever so melancholy.

John—he's always joking
And Ben just always a'crackin';
Fritz, he likes to talk a lot,
And Joe, he just sez nothing.

Those men, those false face men.

Don't you see them coming and going?

Always trying to find a new face

A means and avenue of escape.

Some with ever changing face
Some stolid—the same in every case.
Others put on a lot of grace
While other always, are just out of place.

Stories and tales of woe could be told, Of disappointments, failure, and sorrow.

Chapters in life that will ever hold The yester years for the morrow.

Oh those men, those false face men.

Don't you see them coming and going?

Laughing—cynical—ever smiling—hateful

Evasive — retreative — passive to the last.

CLASS HISTORY

THE autumn of 1930 brought us to High Point College, a harvest of 86 Freshmen mellow with experiences of high school days and ripe for farther progress along the "Royal Road to Leaning," although some insist that there is no such road. We newcomers cast our lot with High Point College at the same time that Dr. Humphreys began his administration, and thus we have reached baccalaureate maturity under his guidance.

With gathering momentum the educational mill started grinding, softening the asperities of the raw material destined to acquire the polish of learning. The first revolutions of the mill had scarcely been completed when we elected Donald Helmick as president and Miss Idol was chosen as our class advisor.

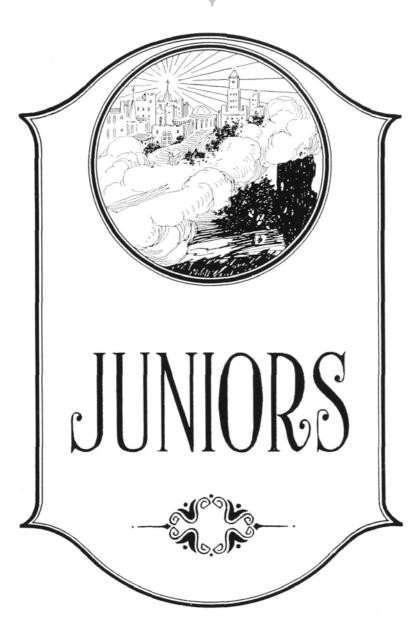

Ground between the upper and nether millstones of the depression and the vicissitudes of life as Freshmen, we returned to college the following year as Sophomores and enjoyed the rights and privileges of upperclassmen. The miller had exacted his toll from our ranks, and Miss Idols absence caused our choice of Mr. Garrett as advisor. John Taylor was elected president.

In our Junior year the milling was easier, since we were accustomed to the process and were finding our proper grooves in the machine. Joe Coble was our president and Miss Idol had returned as our advisor. The mill seemed to turn faster as Senior days approached, and we were soon numbering the days before our race was run.

We chose Robert Williams as our president for the last year. Miss Idol was ill, and Mr. Yarborough took her place as our advisor. The mill increased its speed to the maximum as we came to our last days as students.

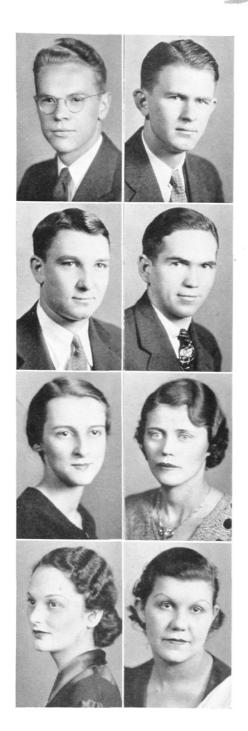

Now that the grinding has ceased, a startling and bewildering silence reigns, but not for long, for we are even now caught up in the Mill of Life.

The state of the s

WENTY-FIVE years later at the dawn of the twentieth century we find a lively little industrial community has sprung up, principally active in furniture and woodworking lines. Drawing on natural hardwood resources these enterprises were manufacturing and shipping to a wide territory. Money began coming back to town and the vision of the people was broadening. Ten years later, in 1910, we find the movement of the textile industry southward.

A CAPELLA CHOIR

The Choir, under the direction of Miss Margaret Sloan, is composed of approximately fifty voices. This organization has traveled extensively during the past three years and has won the approval and appraisal of music lovers throughout eastern United States. Critics have lauded the presentation of the music, the perfect blending of voices, and the artistic interpretation of each selection.

There are only a few trained voices in the choir, the majority being untrained and inexperienced, yet, under the able leadership of Miss Sloan, they have been blended into striking uniformity, and taught the fullest appreciation of each composition.

The choir in itself is unique, since there are only two other organizations of this kind in the State of North Carolina. It has afforded those who have heard it, a joyous renaissance of spirit; and those who have participated, a deeper appreciation of the beauty in music.

ORGANIZATIONS

ITH organizations some twenty-eight strong, and officials making up a staggering total of seventy-two, the innocent onlooker might be tempted to make slurring remarks. Such remarks, however, would indeed be unjust.

Practically every vocation known to man, with the possible exception of horticulture, has a representative organization on the campus. Athletics, government, business, the stage, journalism, social work, music, art, literary activities, forensic—each has its followers and its leaders, to whom we give praise and appreciation. Not only have the various groups organized, but they have functioned and functioned well—a truly remarkable feat when the number is considered.

The athletic teams deserve the highest of praises. Handicapped in many instances, they have nevertheless given the student body just cause for pride in their ability and sportsmanship. Their efforts have not always been covered with the laurel of victory, but their defeats have been honorable and we have no reason for censure.

The various student governing bodies have turned in a splendid record. Three governing bodies on the campus, each functioning smoothly and efficiently and even more, harmoniously. With efficient leaders, a cooperative student body, and a thinking faculty, failure was impossible. Allah be praised!

In the realm of theatrical work we must pause for moment and mentally pat ourselves on the back. Albeit, we have not uncovered a potential Greta Garbo (humbly grateful) not a John Barrymore (doubt), but we have presented several very excellent productions. The plays received commendation from critics all over the state, even though the average student was a trifle dazed by the presentation of "Aria da Capo." Not content with merely producing plays, this little group of enthusiasts have written several plays which in time will be presented.

The journalistic field has furnished the inspiration for two distinct publications—the newspaper and the yearbook. The former started the school year with a financial obligation and an editorial staff of three. Obstacles seem to exist only to be overcome, however, and the Hi-Po has come through with flying colors, holding a place among the leaders in intercollegiate publications. The Zenith, a member of the North Carolina College Press Association, although handicapped by limited funds, is a yearbook which might easily represent a much larger institution. Congratulations to the Senior Class!

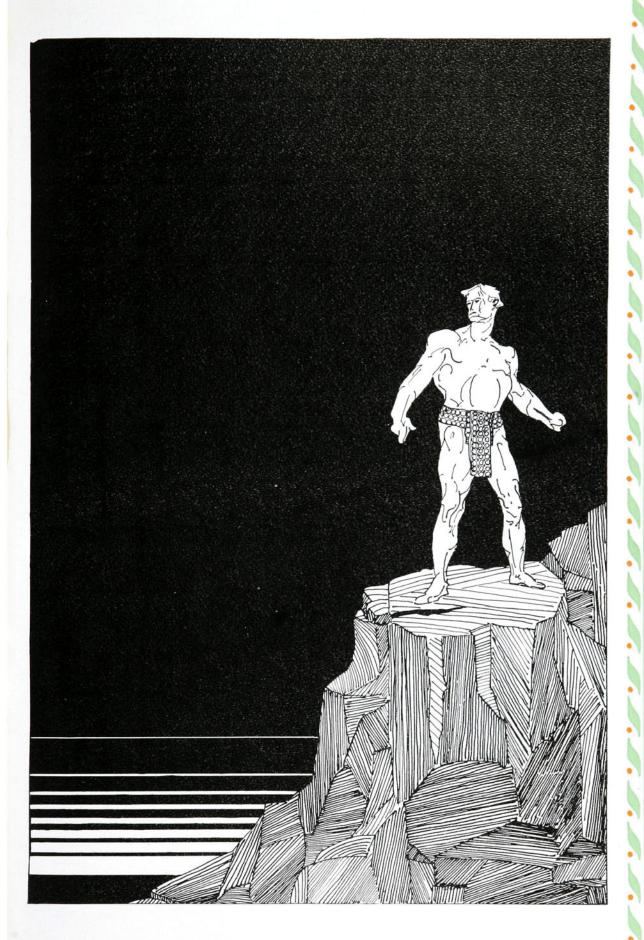

The Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., Christian Endeavor, and the Ministerial Association have offered a varied training and programs to those interested in social work. These groups have accomplished many worthwhile projects in their respective fields and also have shown the practical side of such work.

For the more aesthetic students, the musical and artistic groups have presented programs which left nothing to be desired. The choir was unusually successful and the musicals put on by the choristers afforded great pleasure to both students and mere citizens. The art class secured for the student body an exhibition of paintings and prints which proved of great interest to the student body and town people.

The literary societies turned out a goodly crop of debaters and orators. In the realm of debate, the college was not an outstanding success, but neither was it a failure. The debating team shows great promise for the future, and losing none this year, the college should be unusually successful in next year's tournament. Along oratorical lines, our efforts were marked by considerable success, taking second place in both the men's and women's division.

The year has been a success so far as the organizations go. Some have risen only to fall, some have fallen to rise again, while others have plodded steadily along and ultimately achieved success. As the years roll by may we look back on our favorite groups with feelings of pride—success or failure—we enjoyed it!

HIS industry has found High Point an ideal location and an industry paralleling the rapid growth of furniture manufacturing has taken firm root. Today we have a modern city of over thirty-seven thousand people; some one hundred and twenty-five manufacturing plants representing widely diversified products, hosiery, textiles, and furniture predominating. There are many men in High Point about whom the romance of American Business could be written.

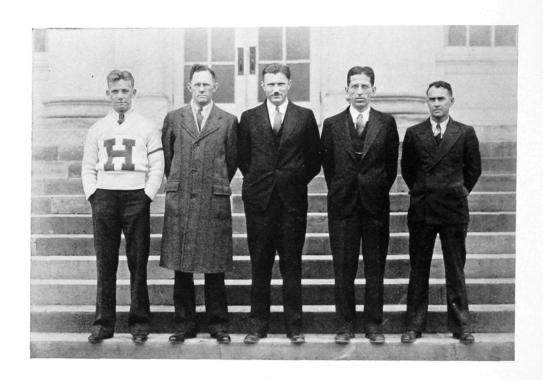

ATHIBICS

COACH YOW

Coach Yow came to us last year as an alumnus and head basketball coach, and skillfully triumphed over countless odds to mold a winning team out of green material. It was a man-sized task. Even though last year's results did not prove to be the acme of perfection, they prophesied inevitable success for him.

This year Coach has done something essentially big. Not only has he coached his teams to win, but also given them something infinitely more valuable—instruction in clean sportsmanship and good spirit. Through his ability to work with men and his unwillingness to admit defeat, he has proven himself valuable and won the admiration of all who know him.

THE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

The Athletic Association, under the guidance of Dr. Hinshaw as president, has weathered many a gale. They have had many problems to work and have come through them with the wisdom of Solomon. Our entire athletic program has been intrusted into the hands of this capable group, and as a result we find that we have one of the highest rating schools in athletics in the North State conference. Every year brings something more interesting and more fascinating to the college. Although our football was lost to us last year, track took its place with great zeal.

Last year the association brought a sport that is more of an American game than football—baseball. This is our major sport and we are proving to the opposition that we are not embarrassingly backward in the game.

The schedules have been tutored by the association each year, hence, we have had schedules that are especially patterned for the students of the college. In conclusion, the Athletic Association stands for only the highest form of sportsmanship and sets this forward as their major goal.

BASKETBALL SQUAD

RONYECZ—"Bobo" our sole and only Pennsylvanian to help us in the desperate trial for the championship, was a great thorn in the side of anyone who opposed him. He was taken from the squad at the last of the season with vertebrate trouble, but we'll watch for him next year.

Culler—This little flash who set the fastest pace that the Little Six had seen last year, came back with that same burst of smoke this year and ran through the opposition with the graceful rapidity of a sly fox. "Here's mud in your eye," Broadus.

Shore—"Tink" came from King, N. C., and protected his birthright when it was time for accuracy in passing and shooting. "Tink" was a Freshman this year and will probably see plenty of action before he reaches for the "sheep-skin" in '37.

WILLIAMS—"Pinky" was the pilot this year and he guided the team through a very successful year at that post. Although he was kept out a part of the time with injuries, he was the master of all he surveyed while playing.

RIDGE—"Tuffie," who lives in High Point and boards at the same place, acted as pivot man this year. Hs was not fortunate or unfortunate enough to be a tall man, but he "stuck in there and fought 'em" all the time.

15.5.5.5.5.5

BASKETBALL SQUAD

DIAMONT—"Chin," playing his first season with the Panthers, developed into a very valuable man. Speed, accuracy, and calmness helps to summarize Diamont. He could always take it on the chin and come up for more.

Rogers—Coming to us a freshman this year, he broke into the cage game with a "bang" and proved himself to be an oncoming youngster and a good prospect for next year.

HUMPHREYS-Is one of the few "jug handles," or left-handers, as they are sometimes called, that we are honored with. He was always a mystery to the opposing clubs. They were ELDER—Who has been with us a couple of years is showing very good prospects as a varsity man. Next year we will be depending on him to deliver the goods.

PEELER—The "Lawndale Flash," was hard to keep an eye on while he was streaking around the court, but we took it for granted that he was playing a straight game. He still has three years to "flash" around, and is a very likely prospect for a varsity berth.

OAKLEY-The "Big Boy" of the mountains came through with the goods a number of times this year. Although he was too big to move fast, he furnished plenty of opposition for the outsiders.

DYER-Another "Big Boy," only he is from the Sand Hills, pulled a few tricks out of his sleeve and showed us what that ball was made for. He has three more years in which to "strut his stuff."

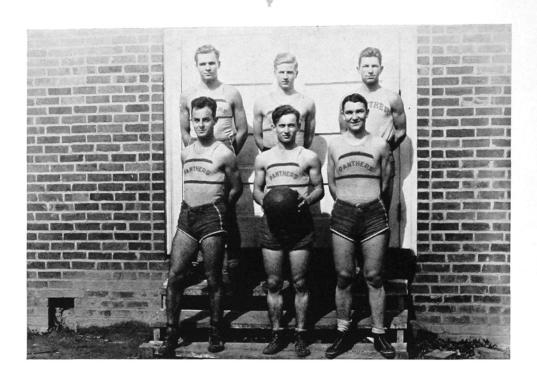

looking for passes from the normal side, and when that ball came shooting around the "port side" it was baffling. Here's to Humphreys, watch his smoke.

BOOTH—The "crooning" first year center only had a chance to show his speed a few times, but he showed us enough those few times for us to be depending on him for a great deal in the next few years that he will be with us.

KOONCE—Came to us from High Point and pulled a few tricks out of the bag. He will probably furnish us with plenty of thrills before he picks up the cane of retirement.

LEE SHERRILL Manager Basketball

PURPLE KITTENS

The Purple Kittens had a very successful year in basketball this year. There was some very promising prospects on the team, although they were not exactly capable of showing "stuff" on the varsity.

Coach Winnie Beck ran his cagers against some pretty stiff competition in the various mill teams in the city and came through with a very successful season with them. Warlick, a flash from Lawndale, came through with the goods this year as a Kitten. He was not eligible for the varsity, coming to us from Appalachian State Teachers College. We are expecting him to be invincible next year.

The Yowmen will probably be made stronger next year as Coach looks over the Kitten material of last year and selects some of the best material for his big cage cats.

BASEBALL

During the college baseball season of 1933, the baseball nine of High Point College won ten games out of the twenty-one played. Considering the fact that this was the first year of the baseball since 1930, the team did surprisingly well. Craver and McCachern were the only two men who were in college in 1930, and the team was composed largely of inexperienced men.

Lee Sherrill carried the burden in the pitcher's box with a little help from some of his mates, winning six and losing six. He did some excellent pitching, but was not accorded the support which he should have had. Craver and Culler also pitched some good games, but they also lacked support, due largely to the greenness of the team as a whole.

In batting averages Pinkston topped the list with an average of 467. He was followed in order by Craver, Bryant, Graham, and James.

SOCCER

Soccer very effectively filled the gap made by the absence of football on the athletic program. High Point College boasts of a men's soccer team undefeated by any college aggregation. The number of men participating in soccer bespeaks the popularity of the sport on the campus.

Intramural soccer contests among the girls displayed both interest and ability on the part of the fairer sex. The class tournament was won by the first year girls with the seniors giving them some stiff competition.

Utility Service and the Community

More than any other one factor, the quality of its utility services determines the desirability and attractiveness of a community for business or as a place in which to live.

In industry and in the home the application of electricity to industrial and household operations is multiplying the effectiveness of the labor of the worker and relieving the housekeepers of drudgery and fatigue. And while it increases the efficiency of the individual, it raises the quality of the work accomplished as well.

We invite attention to the standard of utility services in the cities in which we supply these essentials to modern living and modern business.
