Three bottom photos: The Centennial Square townhome community's wellness center includes a learning commons and fitness center.

Three new facilities opened on campus in fall 2012.

The School of Education: In August, the new $10 million, 31,000-square-foot School of Education opened complete with its own resource center, library and study lounge. The School of Education meets LEED (Land Environment Economics and Development) Certification. This certification is a rating system for "green" buildings developed by the Green Building Environmental Council of the United States (USGBC).

Centennial Square: Centennial Square also opened in August and is a townhome community housing nearly 349 students in 11 townhome buildings that are 2½ stories tall. Each of the 2,300–2,700-square-foot townhomes has six bedrooms, 4½ baths, complete kitchen, dining area, laundry room and commons room. A wellness center, complete with a learning commons and fitness center, is also part of the community.

Human Biomechanics and Physiology Lab: In November, the School of Health Sciences opened the Human Biomechanics and Physiology Lab at Oak Hollow Mall. The 13,150-square-foot facility houses sophisticated research equipment in a space like no other on the East Coast. The equipment is utilized by students studying a variety of fields including physical therapy, exercise science, athletic training, biology, physics, chemistry, mathematics and more.

New programs in the School of Health Sciences will create approximately 90 jobs between faculty and support staff and will bring 500 new students to High Point. The lab is made up of three parts: biomechanics, physiology and a clinical aspect, where patients can be rehabilitated or trained to avoid injury. State-of-the-art equipment allows for students to be involved in ground-breaking and impactful research.

ORIENTATION MOVE-IN

As the largest class in HPU's history arrived to campus, a smiling crew of volunteers eagerly greeted and helped them with a swift and smooth move-in day. Afterward, freshmen attended a luau to meet other students and prepare for Convocation the next day. This year, rain forced Convocation indoors, but the tone stayed the same as the president shared great words of advice to the new students and offered encouraging words to ease parents' anxiety. Following tradition, students signed the honor code and the 2012–2013 school year officially began.

Home Sweet High Point.

In addition to the great music they played for HPU's students, they shared inspiring messages about staying strong during tough times. And the opening act? HPU's very own DJ Nico.

FALL FAMILY WEEKEND

More than 4,000 guests traveled to HPU from all over the country in October for the annual Fall Family and Alumni Weekend. The weekend offered plenty of activities for students and their families to enjoy, including academic panels, games and sporting events.

FALL ALUMNI WEEKEND

Hundreds of alumni returned to High Point University for the Fall Alumni Weekend in October. The graduates and their families got to meet with current students and attended a series of events including campus tours, a School of Education open house and an awards banquet to honor the work and service of four outstanding alumni.

CULTURAL ENRICHMENT

HPU offered its students a series of cultural events, thanks to the university's cultural enrichment grants. The series allowed HPU faculty to feature nationally renowned academics, artists and performers around campus. This year, the series offered lectures on everything from political satire and marketing to live dance and musical performances.

DEMOCRACY USA

The 2012 presidential election provided an extraordinary learning opportunity for HPU students. The Democracy USA Project was designed to prepare the nation's future leaders and to challenge the idea that today's citizens are losing their ability to work together. The project hosted a Presidential Debate viewing party, voter registration events and sent nearly 100 students to both the Republican and Democratic National Conventions.

HOLIDAY CELEBRATIONS

You can't escape the holiday spirit on HPU's campus. The buildings are decorated with lights, holly and huge Christmas trees. A horse drawn sleigh provides holiday rides for students. Even Santa Claus took time to visit campus. But, we don't forget what the season is all about. Students marked the holiday with a candle light service, holiday choral concert and a traditional Hanukkah dinner at 1924 Prime.

HPU CARES

Super Storm Sandy hit close to home for many HPU students. To show their support, students, faculty and staff stepped up to start the "HPU Cares" initiative. They held a blood drive; numerous fundraising events, including "Pie the One Who Cares" where students pied peer mentors, resident assistants, staff and administrators for a donation; and SGA gave a donation of $6,000. The university matched every dollar raised, and students were able to present the American Red Cross with a check of $22,000 for recovery efforts.

COMMUNITY SERVICE

HPU students make it a point to give back to their community. This year, whether it was through classes or events they organized themselves, students found new and creative ways to make a difference in High Point and around the world.

Another trip went to Holt, Ala., where students helped tornado victims fix their damaged homes. Students traveled back to Alabama in the spring to help clear spaces for new homes and work at food pantries. A final group organized by HPU's service fraternity, APO, went to Joshua Tree National Park in California where they started work on a new trail and renovated others.

Also, the running team completed their first full marathon this year. The awards and recognitions that various HPU club sports teams have acquired throughout the year are proof of the dedication of their athletes.

ACTIVITIES

It seems like there is something different to do every weekend at HPU. So much, there's no way we could fit it all into one book. From bigger events like the Party in the Park and the Welcome Back Fair, to special performances and games at the Extraordinaire Theatre, to trips to the Dixie Classic Fair and ice skating, there's a little something for everyone. Here are just a few examples of how students spent their free time.

STUDY ABROAD

Immersing yourself in another culture, that's what HPU's study abroad programs are all about. This year, students did everything from learning to play a didgeridoo to grinding coffee beans, from walking the Great Wall of China to spending a semester at sea. These are experiences the students will never forget.

COMMENCEMENT

It was cold, but the rain held off for the class of 2013's commencement ceremony on May 4. It was a day full of memories for the largest graduating class in HPU history. Apple co-founder Steve Wozniak encouraged the graduates to keep their young ideals; a surprise honorary degree was given to an exceptional man who was practically a student over the last four years; and proud families and friends got to cheer on their graduates as they walked across the stage.
