Departments Announce Developments

High Point College is Dr. H. W. Miller, Jr.

Dr. Miller said that during second semester mineralogy and geology will be offered. Mineralogy is the study of the composition, formation, and identification of minerals.

Petrology is also the study of the composition, formation, and identification of rocks.

Dr. Miller said that a rockbox is now available to students. The rockbox contains a number of thin sections of rocks and for petrographic microscopes have been added to the equipment.

The purpose of the rockbox is to slice slabs of rocks. The laboratory unit servers for cutting thin sections of rocks for polishing rocks.

The rockbox, which is filled with sand and elevated at one end, shows how erosion is in slice slabs of rocks. The topographic microscopes have been added to the equipment.

Dr. Earl Crow, assistant professor of religion and philosophy announced that future plans for a major in philosophy rather than a minor in religion-philosophy degree are being discussed. A candidate for a major in philosophy would have to meet new and more requirements in that particular field.

New courses are being offered this year by the religion and philosophy department. In religion, "History of Christianity" is taught by Dr. Earl Crow.

Dr. Crow said that notable night when Harrison Doud, an old High Point Junior College, is Dr. H. W. Miller, Jr.

Quantity or Quality?

Given the purchasing power, would you choose to buy a pair of weejuns, or rather would you be content to settle merely for a pair of inexpensive, knock-off, discount store loafers? If you did so, could you be measured to stereotype you as "dull" and probably unacceptable in the circles of the campus elite?

Yet, to go one step further, let us examine the economic reasoning behind this purchase. American economic practicality influences us to purchase quality rather than quantity. Although quality costs a bit more, it may be utilized twice as long as the mediocre, economy product.

Furthermore, when we are the possessors of quality, we exhibit it with an air of prestige because we are proud of our foresight. Neither would we purchase quality for a pair of inexpensive off-brand, discount store loafers?

Quantity or Quality?

Explanation Are Necessary

Now that I can honestly believe that this is the Fall semester at HPC as opposed to second semester summer school (the heat, man!), I perhaps can apply my mental facilities to the problem affecting us. We, in attempting to organize within our own selves the basics for independence, must be given the freedom to learn from experience.

We do not believe we should be given free rein; rather, we believe it is the role of the American adult, and especially the educator, to extend guidance to us—guidance with the understanding that we must be allowed the freedom to judge between good and evil.

To exemplify my point, I raise the question of the validity of H.P.C. students being required to sign a student pledge (of which they had no prior knowledge) before being allowed to register for courses. Although many H.P.C. students have already registered for the semester, it is possible many have repressed, the weakness in this innovation lies not in the fact that we were asked to verify our belief in the philosophy and rhapsody of our college, but rather that we were required to do so upon entry by "agrees" I mean without the privilege of renewing our own knowledge of the philosophy as set forth in the student handbook and college catalogue, which I might add that upperclassmen did not receive until after arriving back at school this year.

Furthermore, now that we have compiled with the college desires, perhaps an "en masse" explanation for the reasoning behind this requirement might possibly provide interesting spare time reading.

Are we little children who have prolonged our stage of stagnation? Not! We are souls searching for ourselves: We are young men and women who are striving to assume the responsibility which life entails. And we must not be pushed.

The Flight of the Falcon’s Dagge. During the past summer, the flight of the Falcon, the Rockefeller Foundation’s most promising celebrity, has been the subject of much speculation. Now that this speculation has reached its conclusion, we may all breathe a sigh of relief. The Falcon has returned to its home in the American Southwest, where it will continue its work of educating young people about the importance of conservation.

The Word That Sheds Light. In this summer’s edition of the Rockefeller Foundation’s newsletter, we learn that the Falcon has recently visited several new locations, including a high school in the Southwest and a nature preserve in the Northeast. The Falcon has been a popular attraction at these events, and has been seen by thousands of students and adults alike.

How To Win Friends And Influence Teachers
From an article in AMERICAN YOUTH
By Richard Armour

The opening gambit is to come to class late, not merely on the hour, but unavoidably detained by an interesting conversation, but every day. And not a few seconds late, but after the teacher has, let us say, given the assignments for the next week. To get the maximum malignancy out of this, time your arrival to the very moment — when he has finished the preliminary announcements and drawn up a deep breath preparatory to launching into his lecture. Then raise your voice and where he has raised in your direction, cry out, "Would you repeat that — bring it, please?" You can even leave off the "please," but don't try for too much annoyance at once. There is plenty of time.

Speaking of time, shortly after this initial disturbance, and every five minutes thereafter, look at your watch. Your wristwatch will do, provided you hoist your arm in time to sharpen the effect by bringing an alarm clock. If the alarm accidentally goes off at about the middle of the hour, so much the better.

Throughout the class period, he as noisy as possible, not necessary to hum or whistle or hammer out a bongo beat on a pile of books. It will suffice merely to drop things from time to time — pens, pencils, books, tennis rackets, bottles of ink. This last not only will make quite a satisfactory noise, but also will divert attention from the teacher while the floor is mopped up and the girl in the middle gets to work with her cleansing fluid.

Reference to the girl's attire will have done enough damage for one day. This is the time to grab your books and rush out as if you can hardly wait to get to the next class, which is on a more interesting subject and is more competently taught.

Be sure to slam the door as you go out.

The Future
It Depends On You
By June Hill

Freshman Orientation is a must unique time of your life. Never again will you feel so lonely with so much company. Never again will college be so awesome, so new. The strange faces that met you at the gates, that earned your luggage, will soon be familiar faces. The room which first greeted you with cold severity will soon be very personal- sally yours, with a list of you in every corner. Anticipation and fear will pass; you will settle down in your new home.

Do you feel oriented? Has fright been replaced with eagerness and expectation? Do you feel ready to leave four years on your own? Perhaps not. For orientation is not a time when each individual finds his every need cared for and catered to. It is a brief panorama of the whole of your college experience. People will always be around to advise, to cheer, to encourage, but mainly, each person's concern is himself. There is no "Big Brother" watching you here. If you cut a class, no one will reprimand you. If you fail to do your homework, no one will have to know. Only you. The responsibility for your college life lies solely with you. And as in everything else in life, college is what you make it. This is not to say no one cares. You will find many genuine friends here. But no one can do for you what you must do for yourself.

What will you do for yourself? And as important, what will you do for High Point College? Will you rise to the dignity of your position or will you allow yourself to get bogged down with trivial complaints and lame excuses? Will you make these four years a time of introspection and growth or will you leave H.P.C. just as you entered it — perhaps worse off. Have you truly considered the great importance of this time of your life? Will you be a responsible college student?

The Social Lite...
The wish to begin this first column of the school year with an explanation. This undertaking is an effort to put before the student body a brief picture of High Point's social life. We accept news from every source and in every instance and print it for your convenience and enjoyment. We ask for the co-operation of all the organizations on campus. Only through your help can this column be truly informative and interesting.

The Greeks on campus ended the school year with gaiety, began the summer vacation with frolic at the South Carolina beaches, parted ways, and now they have returned to High Point with stories of intrigue, romance, and high adventure. Taking a quick glance around campus, we see that many of our fraternity men have lost their pins and that many sorority women have acquired shining new jewels.

Delta Sig Tie Knot
Three Delta Sigs tied the proverbial knot this summer: Mac Lambeth married Marlene Briley of Zeta Tau Alpha, Gene Koster married June Rankin, and Mickey Russell married Joyce Kirkman. Bill Carter was pinned to Kitty Lambeth of Zeta Tau Alpha; Gene Yokley. We are all pleased to see that many of our Fraternity men lost their pins and that Lambda Chis married Dave Cerchio and that Lambda Chi Dave Cerchio had a tremendous party after the wedding and that Lambda Chi Dave Cerchio married Brenda Symes to Mike Sabino, and Connie Powell to Greg North. Arturine Spay is engaged to Richard Harmon from Connecticut.

Marty Weds Secretly
Marty Hedin, brother of Zeta Tau Alpha announced the secret wedding to David Dartweyler. Also married were Ann Organ and Jim Arthur. Valerie Loebach announced her engagement to Tom Parker. Zeta's fall initiales will be Joan Warren and Jeannie Ellickson.

Besides the two Kappa Delta sisters who married Lambda Chi, wedding bells rang for Cynthia Beall and Doug Hyatt, Peggy Wiley and Dale Neal, and Patty McCormack and Joe Knuckles. Vicki Robles is engaged to Jerry Froollo of Lambda Chi Alpha, and Leslie Van Fossen is pinned to Steve Perry of Phi Delta from Davidson.

Jackie Brendle attended the national Kappa Delta Convention in Chicago this summer. Our best wishes go to Omegia Walrep who is recovering from foot surgery.

Summertime weddings also rang for two more Alpha Gam's, Suzanne Mock married Bob Jesup of Delta Sigma Phi and Kay Demik married Kirk Stewart. Alpha Gam's Dawn Hamilton and Becky Williams have transferred to the University of Kentucky and The University of Maryland, respectively.

Judy Attends Conference
The Phi Mu National Leadership Conference was attended by Judy Stone. Phi Mu marriages included: Brenda Symes to Mike Sabino, and Connie Powell to Greg North. Arturine Spay is engaged to Richard Harmon from Connecticut.

Glancing around the campus, one can see hundreds of purple and white bouquets flowering frantically to classes. Our warmest welcome goes to our freshmen class. Congratulations to Tom Buzman, Vice-President of the Student Government, and to the Orientation Committee for an outstanding Orientation Program.

Players Stage Coke Party
Who else would have a coke party? This was the first meeting of the year. Plans discussed during the meeting, conducted by president Ralph Hour, were for the production of William Congreve's The Way of the World. With a cast of six men, nine women, and extras, the play is a comedy written during the eighteenth century restoration period.

Following the business part of the meeting, the crowd moved from the stage to seats in the audience while sophomore Nancy Taylor, senior Jerry Proffit, and junior Al Thorburn presented several numbers from last year's play, Fantasticks.

The lightness and variety of the performances captured the audience and provoked whispers of admiration between the acts. Jerry Proffit also presented his characterization of Mark Twain, in the latter years of his life, as a lecturer.

Let the secret again changed, this time to the foyer of the auditorium for cokes, cookies, and potato chips. The Tower Players received their guests and prospective members.

For the second straight year High Point College is offering three Presidential award scholarships totaling $10,000. To receive the scholarships, students must have outstanding personal characteristics, high academic qualifications, and a record of service to their school, church, and community.

Students receiving these awards this year include: Dreta Blackburn, Mr. Aby, N. C.; Linda Blalock, Washington, D. C.; Margaret Brookhahn, High Point, N. C.; Daniel Crowes, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Frances Carris, Christiansburg, Va.; and Nancy Holcombe, Stateville, N. C.

Moody Heade Human Relations At High Point College

Dr. Wendell F. Patton, president of the college, has announced the establishment of the Department of Human Relations at HPC.

Founder of the American Human Relations Foundation and guest speaker for the event, Dr. H. B. Hartley, was instrumental in securing the grant—one of three in the United States—for the college.

The new department will be headed by Leslie E. Moody, who received his B.S. in History and Science from Kansas State University and his M.A. in Diplomatsy from Stanford University in California.

The program, designed to better equip students for youth leadership, will consist of field trips and seminars to acquaint students with the principles, techniques, and theories in the field of human relations.

High Point College was selected by the Foundation for its small size, atmosphere of challenge for service, and strong liberal arts program.

Pope Compliments Cooperation of freshmen and transfer students during the humid hours spent in the auditorium during orientation week impressed a great many people.

Dr. Pope stated that he was highly impressed by their cooperation and ability to follow directions. He said the new students were serious minded, polite and appeared to have a direction for which they were headed.

Dr. Pope also commended last year's students on the atmosphere and helpfulness they showed toward the new students.

He conducted the fall placement tests, giving a total of seven tests. All the tests will be graded and the results given to the student upon request.

Throughout the year Dr. Pope will continue to give tests to the students who wish to take them. He has on hand study habits, personal adjustment, vocational and scores of other tests available to all students. His office is also well equipped with many catalogs for graduate and undergraduate schools.

Along with faculty advisors, Dr. Pope will help the student choose a major field for which he is best suited.

Students are encouraged to keep in touch with Prof. Pope. Last week he said, "Students are my colleagues. I am not here to lead them but to guide them, and help the men and women of High Point College grow to total maturation."

Editors To Meet Committee on Publications

Editors of THE HI-PO, APO- CEE, and ZENTHI will meet with the Faculty Committee on Publications Monday, October 11, at 3 p.m. room 41 of Roberts Hall. The student editors will discuss problems they might have and present their plans for the coming year.

Panthers Hope For Successful Season

By Ronald Loewenthal

Lacking experience? Nevertheless, the HPC basketball team should be a top contender for the Carolina Conference title.

Returning from last year's Dist-ting Festival, 6' 9" Steve Tatgenhorse, a starter for last year's team, is back. He is 6' 9" pivot man, and two forwards, 6' 5" Ryan Wall and 6' 7" Ron Loewenthal.

Heading the list of freshmen is Garrett Edelson, 6' 10" from Washington, D. C. It is anticipated that Chris Taylor, 5' 10" from Rochester, New York, an excel-ten guard, and Jerry Green, 6' 10" forward, will make a more than ample cutting mate at guard for Littles.

Though football is fairly popular in this area, there seems to be little interest in the sport on the small-college level. Seven of the ten colleges which are members of the Carolinas conference do have football, but most have rather pitiful attendance. Even championship teams attract only meager crowds.

Some have suggested that the college enter the football realm on a non-revenue basis. Obviously any such team could hardly compete with the teams whose players are on scholarship.

Even if funds could be found to support a team, when could the games be played to avoid conflict with the Big Four? Saturday nights have been suggested, but football games are usually weekend affairs with pre- and post-game parties at the universities.

Certainly there are advantages to having a football team, porticulicularly in the case of public relations and completing the existing physical education program. At the present time, however, it does seem as an unusual venture.

As head of the athletic department, Dr. James T. Hamilton, stated, "We have to decide which is more important - football or the rest of the programs. We have new science buildings, a new student center, and higher faculty salaries. In each case it has to be said that the needs are more important than football.''

October Marks Beginning Of Cross-Country

The 1965 edition of High Point College's cross-country team opens their schedule against St. Andrews College in Laurinburg, North Carolina, Tuesday, October 12. Lew Farlow, who set track records in this country last year will not be returning. However, Captain Griff Ball, Ed Clarke, last year's number three man, Larry Neal, and Charlie So will be back.

Four Freshman will round out the team.

One outstanding prospect is Doug Fair from North Hagerstown, Maryland. The other is Dave Scholtz, Tim Taylor, and Bill Green.

A fairly large number of spectators are anticipated to lend support, especially at home meets held at Blair Park Golf Course.

Coach Bob Davidson is to be commended for a tremendous job in realizing the cross-country team for inter-school competi-

UNC-G Theater Plans

Integrated Program, Excursion In Europe

A season of comedy, music, and drama is on the bill of fare for the theater of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, the piece de resistance will be a visit to Germany, France, and Italy.

William Shakespeare's The Tempest begins the theater year with performances of the poetry comedy scheduled for Dec. 9, 10, and 11.

March 3, 4, and 5, Al Capp's famous comic strip Li'l Abner will come to life on stage in a top musical comedy. This will be the production the UNC-G theatre group will carry to Europe under the American Educational Theatre Association-department of the O.U.S.A. program. It will be the third overseas tour by a UNC-G drama group.

The seven-week tour will begin March 15 and will cover approximately 10,000 miles in France, Germany, and Italy, with a company of 18.

Winding up the busy season will be Philip Barry's Hotel Universe, an early musical comedy, which is listed in the era of the Great Depression. It will be given May 12-14.

Frosh, Sophs To Engage In Tug-o-War

Freshmen and sophomores will engage in a tug-o-war Nov. 12 at 3:30 p.m. to determine whether or not the neophytes can remove their beards, announced Gary Sappenfield, president of the frosh-sophomore class.

The site for the conflict will be over the creek bordered by E. Farris avenue across from the athletic field.

The losing side will host a victory dance the same evening in the Student Center.

A team of twelve players will be played by Richard Wagner, Charles Kirkjian, and Richard Noble, sophomores who recently formed a tug-o-war team.

Freshmen have won the tug-o-war the last three years by outnumbering their foes.

The thousands of pounds of pressure on the rope being pulled opposite directions has caused the rope to snap the past two years, swelling both sides on the ground. By doubling the rope in half, the rope 'knot' was allowed to continue.

The losers end up in the creek, joined by others in the free-for-all that follows.

Dr. Raiford Porter, assistant professor of English, will be the referee. Certain members of the freshman and sophomore classes will be asked to appear on local television while the four winners will be awarded a victory dance the same evening.

Realizing the shocking fact that a student body could not be ex-pected to develop individual scientific talents under such harrowing conditions, the college began plans for a more adequate building last year. Today the plans are in the final stages. The date of the ground breaking for the proposed building was confirmed to be held on the health center of Monteuville Avenue, has been established as Feb. 15, 1966.

Other Extensions Are Considered Three other extensions are presently under consideration. These include a student union, a religious center, and a lecture hall. All of these projects are dependent upon the completion of the college. This may be attributed to lack of sufficient funds for either project. Funds for these projects must be secured from federal loans and from private or church donations.
Does Sex Saturate HPC? by Jane Hill

There is a greater degree of sexual expression among college students today than ever before--even among the students of High Point College. Perhaps the silent majority are the students of High Point College--the reasons for this vary from one person to another, but the fact remains that many are, indeed, looking for a sexual outlet.

The American community has never truly made up its mind about sex. There are many who feel that sex should be more restrained in the college student. While the faculty and students may be expected by someone else to handle sex properly, the individual himself probably has no idea what he wants. The result is a mixture of confusion and failure.

The reasons are many and deep. It is a time of change, and the student is living in a fish bowl, exposed to all the pressures of society. He wants to find himself the person he is supposed to be, and to preserve these remains, the students of High Point College are currently developing a system of standards enforced and exemplified by the authorities around them. The failure to find a sexual outlet is a great source of depression, as well as sexual aggression.

College is supposed to cut to the chase of material needs. It is a place of searching for an identity, and while no student will find what he is looking for, he finds the opportunity to interact with others who finds what he needs. This is not to interest them in return.

We are here to find a basic complaint about our

High School Student Grips On Teachers' Requirements

Editor's Note: This article written by John B. Bowler, a high school senior from Lima, Ohio, was extracted from Ohio, was entered into the Phi Delta Kappa contest. The author, a 17-year-old Brown Deer, Wis., student, describes his experiences during the first day of school and reports to that student's viewpoint, the same rules might be followed in the college classroom.

Most of my 17 years on earth have been spent in a classroom--a desk which usually has been too small for more than one. Time and time again I have gotten an illuminating chuckle and move on to the next one...

If there is extra time left during the period, sit comfortably at your desk silently reading your grade book. From time to time glance at any student who may be near you. This will drive him to the door of the teacher who, per perhaps, is always right.

Remember, 'the ultimate weapon,' and 'despite the fact that you have yet to give a grade below B to the present group; the future last year's class was."

Netmen Forsee 1966 As Winning Season

by Ben Lowenthal

As a result of last year's second-place finish in the Carolinas Conference Tournament, the 1966 netmen should be one of the best that HPU has had in many years.

Returning, with a year's experience, is Ken Machlin, last year's second-flight singles champion and outstanding freshman player in the conference. Coach Tom Quinn has commented that Machlin should become one of the better tennis players that the Carolina conference has ever produced.

Also returning are Larry Ansek, a three-year veteran, and Bob Whitaker, the number-five man on last year's team.

Colonel Carlton J. Cook, head of the mathematics department, is logic at its best.

When asked why he liked math, Murray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Honeycutt, 813 West Farrues, said, 'It is logical in its best, and I enjoy analyzing and discovering the truths about things through the logical and mathematical approach.'

Charles W. Honeycutt is the first math major who passed both advance placement examinations in mathematics since this program was started. The latter part of last year, states Colonel Carlton J. Cook, head of the mathematics department.

When asked why he liked math, Honeycutt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Honeycutt, 813 West Farrues, said, 'It is logical in its best, and I enjoy analyzing and discovering the truths about things through the logical and mathematical approach.'

Charles is now taking a course in analytical calculus. 'I'm interested in analytical research,' he declared, 'but as yet, I haven't decided which path I will follow in the field of mathematics.'

Colonel Cook stated that the mathematic advance placement program will assist those students who pass them by allowing the students, in whatever field, to go on to other subject areas. Since this was the first year the college has offered these examinations, there was not as much participation from the students.

Two other freshman students, Walter J. Hendrick, an English and drama major from Silver Spring, Maryland, and Linda B. Simmons, a pre-medical student from Huxtableville, Ohio, also passed both advance placement examinations in math.

HPC Ceremonial Traditions Increase With New Additions of Mace, Seal

New notes of authority and symbolism have been added to the college ceremonial traditions with the inclusion of a specially designed mace and seal.

Originally an emblem of authority dating back to the reign of James I of England, the mace was one of the prerogatives of the university in academic use, it is the symbol of a college or university as a corporate body of scholars with its own legally constituted authority. Born in procession immediately before the chief executive of a college, it is placed before him during formal academic ceremonies.

Conrad, Patton, Instigates Idea

The idea of a mace for High Point college was instigated by Dr. Harold Conrad, dean of academic planning, and Dr. Wendell Patton, president, and designed by Raiford Porter, assistant professor of art. The plans were commissioned to Jake Wagster of High Point who hand-carved the mace from pecon wood. Distinctive is the lamp of learning found at the top. Cast in bronze by the National Coin Corporation of Munice, Indiana, the seal will be worn by the chief executive during commencement occasions.

Designed in 1925 by Dr. N. M. Harrison, then serving as dean of the college, the seal displays the lamp of learning positioned on a book not in use they are placed on a shelf when religion and the knowledge of man. Behind the lamp is a cross in a field of knowledge. Behind the lamp is a series of Roman capital letters that is not in use they are placed on a shelf when religion and the knowledge of man. The attention of God, Latin motto, "Nil Sine Numine," is the seal displayed on the chief executive during formal occasions.

Seal Includes Latin Motto

When the seal and mace are worn by the chief executive during formal occasions, the seal displays a Latin motto, "Nil Sine Numine," which means "Nothing Without Divine Guidance." A belt encircling the seal symbolizes the tie between the university and the knowledge of man.

When the seal and mace are used in academic settings, the lamp of learning is positioned on a book not in use they are placed on a shelf when religion and the knowledge of man. During commencement ceremonies, the seal displays the lamp of learning positioned on a book not in use they are placed on a shelf when religion and the knowledge of man. Junior Marshalls

Committee Selects 12 Junior Marshals

The cornerstone of the administration building, Roberts Hall, was laid June 29, 1965, followed closely by the construction of a dorm for men, McCulloch Hall, a central heating plant. Sept. 15, 1965, freshmen began study with 122 students.

From these modest but ambitious beginnings, HPC has enjoyed growth, achieved maturity and established a mark of excellence in the academic community.

Visiting Lecturer Dr. Rubin Speaks On Southern Writers' Contributions

In an address on Oct. 18, visiting lecturer Dr. Louis D. Rubin asserted the importance of literature. Rubin has been an English professor at SXU since 1939 and was a part of the Visiting Scholars program offered by the Piedmont University center.

In an address on Oct. 18, visiting lecturer Dr. Louis D. Rubin asserted that memorable literature has been produced during the twentieth century by Southern writers, intellectuals, and artists, who outgrew their Southern surroundings, but they found the North was not as enchanting as the South was in search of favorable surroundings, but they found the North was not as enchanting as the South. However, the Southern writer could not go home again. He could not accept what he found there when he returned. The homeland was no longer the community it had been, and he was no longer part of it, he added.

Rubin Teaches at Hollins

Dr. Rubin, a professor at Hollins college, upheld his assertion with references to Thomas Wolfe, William Faulkner, and Robert Penn Warren.

The context of Rubin's address was taken from his book, "The Faraway Country: Writers of the South."

Rubin Addresses Poetry Class

He also spoke to Dr. Sam J. Underwood's modern poetry class and was the guest of honor at an afternoon tea sponsored by the English club.

Dr. Rubin's visit to the campus was part of a visiting scholars program offered by the Piedmont University center.

HPC Is Miracle

"HPC is a miracle in education," announced Hal McPherson, president of the college board of trustees and editor of the High Point ENTERPRISE, at the Golden Decade Planning Conference banquet here Wednesday.

HPC is a rare combination of things and people," he went on, "one that encourages self-discipline and academic freedom."
Are you on the outside looking in—victims of hate, disgust, bitterness, disillusion, anger, confusion, uncertainty, suppression, and alienation? You are not alone. High Point College is full of students who are suffering from the same malady.

Everyday more complaints are launched about the state we're in. "What a gross existence!" (disillusion) "Why did I ever come to HPC?" (disillusion) "This campus is in deep distress!" (disillusion) "Rules, rules, rules!" (hostility) "No one understands us."

"Least of all all the administration." (anger) "They're not fighting for our rights!" (anger) "It's just a bunch of hypocrites."

Draft cards are burned, and ways to beat the draft are sought. All this an anonymous campus generation who has in recent weeks spread their demonstrations against U.S. foreign policy in Viet Nam from Berkeley to Manhattan.

Do College Youth Fear Death? Why have these protests been prompted? Are college youths afraid to fight, afraid of dying?

These demonstrations have aroused great concern among government officials who now fear that the control of the pro-war movement began by American has now passed into the hands of Communists and extremists.

For the most part, however, the views of these "Vietnaks," as these students have been called, are not the opinions of the majority of college youth.

This fact has been proved by the repeatedport this country's policy in Southeast Asia. Students attempted a rally on the university campus at Chapel Hill but were heckled by U.S. supporters by more than 50 to one.

If these are only the actions and opinions of a few, what are the opinions of the majority of collegians?

Students Desire War's End This is a plea. If you are angry enough about being kept in the dark, take some action. Stand up for your right! If you're curious, ask questions. Surprisingly enough, you'll get answers. And this does happen. The administration is being more honest these days.

Get the facts and ask the questions. Do not be afraid of being asked. This is a chance for you to voice your complaints and questions and make your opinions known. This is your opportunity to stand up and be counted.

Each generation has the total responsibility for the world it builds on. Maybe the '40's can strive a little harder with a little more understanding and faith than the '20's. The future has never been a certainty, but the reflection of faith and understanding is needed more than ever. The men of the '20's did not see what was going to happen. They had their problems, but they were not the ones we now face. True, college students, like the men of the last generation, need and desire personal freedom. It is this need that should motivate them to action.

The students are not the only ones with problems. Any person that has had an active connection with a social conscience has experienced the same fear. You are not alone.

These groups offer a rich abundance of organizations for those interested in working with one life-time friends. Thus, the draft does loom as an ominous prospect for the college generations. They have spent nearly their entire lives in preparing themselves to meet the future. They are not cowards, nor are they afraid to die.

They are thinking men who had dreams and ideals which they hope will help to make our society greater than their parents.

Good, do it. And may you not be afraid to do it. Few things in life are as good as taking a stand for something you believe in. No matter how wrong you might be, you can always respect yourself for trying. Good luck, everyone!"

New York Editor James Reston Denounces Student Demonstrations Against Viet Nam Policy At Reviews

"Further student demonstrations against United States Viet Nam policy can only have harmful effects," James Reston, associate editor of The New York Times, told the 18th annual Town Meeting on Books and the Book, October 19 at Greensboro College. "Weekend members of the High Point College faculty and students.

Mr. Reston, who recently returned from a fact-finding trip to South Viet Nam, said that Ho Chi Minh, leader of communist North Viet Nam, feels that eventual national disunity over the Viet Nam problem will force the United States to withdraw in defeat as it helped defeat the French in the Indochina War during 1954.

Besides commenting on the international political situation, Mr. Reston reviewed the book "Kennedy" by Theodore Soren sen as part of the Historical Book Club of North Carolina program.

Joining Mr. Reston on the panel of critics were Miss Margaret Cousins, author of a short story writer as well as a senior editor for Doubleday, and Prof. Walter Spearman, of the School of Journalism at the University of North Carolina.

HPC in Maine

In an atmosphere sprinkled with golden chrysanthemums, Miss Golden Decade Contestants, and the golden voices of the HPC, Concert Choir, directed by Mr. Charles Lysan of the Fine Arts department; 300 guests were caught up by the dynamic momentum of the decade movement.

"The first three years we propose a $2,000,000 campaign," stated Bill Henderson, president of Bennett Advertising and director and chairman of the campaign.

Already the trustees have raised $280,000 of the proposed $2,000,000 goal, and the faculty pledges total 100 percent.

Last week a donor from High Point contributed a $10,000 gift toward the proposed $2,000,000 chapel. "This will definitely put the number two project," stated Henderson.

"Make no little plays; they have no magic to stir men's hearts," said Margaret Cousins, worker of history, social worker, author of several books, and editor of the group mounted.

And High Point College is making no small play. High Point College is leading the list of small colleges in the South in its endeavor to stamp out mediocrity, to uphold quality.

"Two years ago," Wendell M. Patton, president of the college, told the guests, "HPC outlived the Viet Nam policy to accept the mediocrity of her status; she desired to do something about it." And she did.

Two years ago a ten-year long range plan began to be formulated. Students, faculty, administration, trustee and alumni served on a committee which examined the philosophy and objectives of the college.

The committee, after extensive research and planning, released a ten year plan with a $28,000,000 budget.

Several months of further reexamination and compromise revealed a ten year, $10,000,000 budget plan.

The plan is unique in that it review each year will always enable it to predict the succeeding ten years.

Furthermore, each year of evaluation will enable a more precise working plan for the future.

Are Speakers Slighted?

Several weeks ago, a very prominent gentleman traveled from Princeton University to speak to the students of High Point College about Robert Frost. Unfortunately, the gentleman, Dr. Lawrence Thompson, the official Frost biographer, got very little response from the student body. Only a handful of people showed up, and at least half of these were professors or administration members.

Whether Dr. Thompson, who, by the way, delivered a most interesting and interesting personal presentation with Frost, felt slighted because no larger audience attended, I can not say.

Perhaps he expected no larger turnout from a small college, especially since attendance was not required. However, he, and all others visiting lecturers of his caliber do, without question, deserve the consideration of a supposedly well-rounded student body.

Furthermore, how can we as a student body demand the right to attend required assembly attendance if we are not even responsible enough to support an occasional speaker at a non-required performances.

FIRST COME, FIRST SERVE?

Perhaps the most frustrating aspect of college life, or life anywhere for that matter, is having to wait to be served a meal.

Diners in restaurants will get up and walk out if they are not waited on and served with efficiency. Hashands are seen to "rave" (attributed to the poor helpless housewife who isn't his meal prepared on time.

But college students must stand in line and wait their turn for meal service.

Understandable! Especially when there are 4,500 students who must be fed at least one meal a day. Most students have accepted the fact that "First come, first serve is the unwritten law of the Harrison Halls dilemma.

However, there are some exasperated members of the student body who have no respect for their fellow diners. If they happen to feel that it is just a waste of "empty", they lose no time in sightseeing a mutual acquittance at the head of the line and edging their way ahead of 50 other similarly starving persons.

Getting at the head of the line is okay if students have classes or some similarly good excuse. Others are understanding in this respect. But most hard and more collegians continue to disregard the rights of the group, even the minority must suffer.

GOLDMAN WRITES SHOCKER

This is Mr. Goldman's fourth book and his most ambitious one to date.

In his previous works: "Scolar in the Rain", "Your Turn to Cutt..., "The Temple of Gold"- he showed a considerable knowledge in characterization. This promise is to great extent, fulfilled in his last novel.

The characters in "Boys and Girls Together" are nothing short of superb, particularly the characterization of the Old and Old Turf.

Goldman captures the essence of the love between a boy and his grandfather in his magnificent scenes between these two characters. Rudy, alone and rejected by his parents, and Odell Turk, alone and rejected because of his age, complement one another as few characters in popular modem literature do.

Goldman's sureness to his heights in his discussion of these two 20's.

His other characters are not to be passed off lightly either. One is meteorically developed, Goldman handles each with an almost psychodynamic accuracy, and, at the same time, he exposes his object of mind to get in the way of his constructing basically humorous and intensely real people.

If anything is to he criticized, it is that Goldman is not aware of the plot. The author allows himself to be sidetracked by old tired formulas - sentimentalization.

It seems these days that the author is well to write a plot novel is to shoot the pants off until Turf, and this Goldman tries to do. It is because of this that all at times the plot breaks down into excessive Chow.

All in all it's a book well worth reading through. The characterization alone is well worth the price of the effort, and one has a right to say for it, and if you are willing it overlook the manly sentimentalism, you may even find a few trains of unaided-art in the way he creates his characters.

Goldman is obviously one of the better novelists around today, and hopefully, he will continue on a forward to more and better material form him in the future.

Add Your "Two Cents" by TILLIE CLARK

Operation Golden Decade - a program designed by adults, designed by adults for the adult part. Some of the student body have worked for the advertising company handling the publicity for the Golden Decade program, but this is merely token part.

Actually, because of the great lack of detailed information the students have, there is very little we have been able to do. We have had some meetings, have been told what the severity, however, in which the student body can help. The first is by support of the Miss Golden Decade Pageant. Miss Ann Mackie, Operation Golden Decade, has been approached to set this handling this monumental task, is doing a superb job of organizing and directing the pageant. We ask that the student body help with this paper, attending it en masse. With eleven costumed girls to have, that shouldn't be asking too much.

The second way of helping is concerned with the actual building plans of the buildings - the administration, the administrators would like, indeed need to know, what the students think the building will look like.

A detailed table has been suggested by one student. Perhaps there are suggestions of types of rooms that are to be found in a study room.

A great deal of these suggestions and ideas should be brought to the attention of someone who is able to do something about them. The ideas may be given to anyone in student government, in administration, in legislature, or a class council. The ideas may be given to someone of authority.

As a student body, these are two ways by which we can add our "two cents" to the Golden Decade program.
"Why is youth wasted on the young?" Early morning is a time of reflection, and as one sits, book in hand, supposedly engrossed in the knowledge, the eyes stare off into space, and the mind wanders over the past (particularly the past day or so when the present studying should have been done—oh foolishness! But back to deeper thoughts.)

When I was in the fourth grade, I remember faithfully carrying home all my books every night and pouring over the basics of education—arithmetic, spelling, and grammar. I had books of all shapes and sizes, with beautiful big writing, and the tall stack they made on the table beside me. It wasn't until eighth grade, when my studying definitely decreased, that I realized how heavy the books were getting. But I didn't consider myself a diligent student. College was soon enough to turn over a new leaf. Once accepted, I would settle down to routine, responsibility, the rewards of true learning and true knowledge.

College would open the door to the real me—the stimulation would unleash hidden talents and I would acquire a new image of myself.

I would care. I would study. I would learn.

Why am I sitting here, staring off into space at this ridiculous hour, thinking of nothing, cramming in the knowledge?

Administration Strives To Eradicate Doubts

By LINDA ROBERTS

It's not too unusual to hear grumbling comments about the value of our education here on campus. Many students, (who incidentally, will be the first to plain about heavy assignments), agree that a High Point College diploma doesn't carry too much weight in the competitive job market.

Our administrative officials are constantly working to erase these doubts from the minds of the students, and academic improve-ent is evident wherever you go.

A prime example of this was the installation of Kappa Mu Chapter of Delta Pi on this campus last May.

Kappa Delta Pi is a national honor society in the field of education. On our campus, individu-als who are education majors, have at least a 2.0 average, and have exhibited a professional at-titude enabling one to grow in the field are invited to membership.

Dr. Dennis H. Cooke stated that the installation proceeded over a number of years in order for a college to be awarded the chapters. Dickinson High School is the first in our state to be invited to membership.

The national organization hopes to eventually involve every aspect of our institution and the educa-tion department before granting membership. The fact that only five other chapters exist in our state is worthy of noting.

This should dispell many of the doubts people have about the "quality" of our education.

Luboff Choir To Sing In High Point, Nov. 18

The Community Concert Ser-ies of High Point will present the internationally famous Nor-man Luboff Choir in a concert, Nov. 18, at 8 p.m., at the High Point Central High School auditorium.

Students of HPC are admitted free to the concerts; however, students of course.

Tickets may be obtained from Don Draupner, professor of speech and drama, in the Fine Arts building.

Teddi Smith says that she enjoyed the work, but likes her present job much better because of its oppor-tunities for travel.

Teddi commented that she has read the Playboy Philosophy, and respects Hugh Hefner for writing it all although she doesn't agree with all of it. She also re- lied that the upper-echelon Playboy employees are even more sophisticated and urbane than the magazine would sug-gest.

After nine days of signing autographs, making personal ap-pearances, and talking to furni-ture buyers, playmate Teddi Smith headed toward New York City for the weekend before re-turning to her Chicago home.

Exchange Student Feels Very Close To The United States

When asked if he planned to visit home any time soon Charlie quipped, "I barely made it over here, I can't afford to go home for quite some time." Incident-ally, Charlie has not seen his fam-ily to come to the United States.

He attended an English speaking Methodist school in Medan, which is in North Suma-ter, and there became interested in going to school in America. A Methodist preacher, Re-verend Stone, recommended sev-eral colleges here, and Charlie chose High Point. He arrived last year after a long voyage and plane trip and immediately be-gan his indoctrination in American life.

Charlie is not the first of the So family to come to the United States. He has two older sisters attending Bennett College on full scholarships in Greensboro, North Carolina.

Charlie says that he plans to spend his Thanksgiving vacation in Virginia at a convoca-tion of the International Stu-dents Club, of which he is an active member.

When asked if he planned to visit home any time soon Charlie quipped, "I barely made it over here, I can't afford to go home for quite some time." Incident-ally, Charlie has not seen his fam-ily to come to the United States.

Besides being a member of the international students club, Charlie belongs to the Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity and is an active member of The Hi-Po staff as a photographer.

In a discussion of Indonesia, Charlie stated that Sukarno had nationalized all the schools and that now English was only being taught as a short course.

Most English schools have been closed, including the one Charlie previously attended. This means that the younger genera-tion will no longer have a chance to learn the English language.

Charlie finds America a won-derful place to be and plans to spend quite some time here.
Dalby Identifies Mystery Building

Replacing the college warehouse torn down last year to make way for the shopping center at Five Points, a new structure has been erected behind Yadkin Hall. Storing chairs, raisers, platforms, furniture and desks, and mowing equipment, the $11,500 building measures 40 x 30 ft.

College Business Manager Earle G. Dalby commented that the warehouse cost $4 per square inch in contrast to $32 per square inch for Yadkin Hall and 25% per inch for the new science building.

Authorized last year by the Board of Trustees, the location was chosen because the area was too low and too close to the steam plant to be suitable for any other purpose.

To improve the appearance of the area the white shack near the warehouse will be torn down.

North Carolina Fund Seeks Volunteers

Representatives from the N. C. Fund, a state-wide anti-poverty Welfare department program, recently visited the office of Student Personnel. The group is interested in finding volunteers on this campus to help in their program. Representatives would first have to contact local groups in town for support.

Dr. L. Tompson Tells Of His Friendship With Robert Frost
By PAT HARDISTER

Dr. Lawrence Thompson quipped "I have had more fun since I got here than at any other college. It is like being home in the tour. They then proceeded to "take his hair down" and relate a number of accidents which led to his friendship with Robert Frost.

The first accident occurred during Dr. Thompson's second year at Wesleyan.

Frost Speaks at Wesleyan

Frost came to speak there and also held a small meeting that night. He was very friendly. He said that he thought that puppy-love was a very significant thing.

Frost returned to the States and started a search for Sahra Peabody. He was her Frost's childhood sweetheart. He said that he thought that puppy-love was a very significant thing.

His wife was living in Salem, Mass. Although her husband was dead, she said she was never interested in Frost.

There he found some notes written by Frost to Sahra. They were put in a safe, not to be published until after Frost's death.

Frost Finds Notes

Frost did not know that these were there and found them one day by a chance accident.

Dr. Thompson thought that he was angry. He later found that Frost was not angry but deeply moved by the memories that the letters brought.

Dr. Thompson revealed that "Frost was so fascinated by his own life that he never tired of telling of it."

The Socialite

Riviera To Entertain HPCers Nov. 13

By ANNE GRECO and JIM DUGGAN

Social life at High Point is swirling like the brightly colored leaves that blow in the brisk November wind. The S.G.A. is in conjunction with the sophomore class to present a dance at the City Lake, Nov. 13.

Bob Myer and the Riviera have been contracted to play from p.m. till 12. No charge will be made, and all campus must be present at the door.

Since we hear the co-eds whispering about their plans to attend, we expect this to be one of the best dances of the year.

By the way, freshman, this will be the night after you lose the tug of war... so go to the dance and give your spirits a lift!

Dr. Thompson said that although his poem as advertised was not that Frost was a liar, he was not angry but deeply moved by the memories that the letters brought.

Poetic Justice

That night they talked at length about Frost's friendship between the two men. The second of these ended with Dr. Thompson having the permission to do Frost's biography.

This started a long and intimate friendship between the two men. In 1940, they went to Florida. While they were there, Frost's wife died. He never got over this.

World War II interrupted their friendship for a while. After it was over, Dr. Thompson

Tower Players Present 'The Way of the World'

Play's Plot Concerns Wooling Compromise
The Tower Players' latest project, William Congreve's intricately plotted play, concerns the wooing of Millamant by Mariabell and the resulting compromise achieved in the face of the way of the world in which they live.

Plot Reaches Climax
Dramatic building of the plot reaches a climax in the famous 'bargaining' scene wherein the lovers set forth the conditions that will make their union mutually tolerable.

Fainall's love for Mrs. Marwood and the assorted relationships of Mrs. Marwood, Mrs. Fainall, and Millamant to Mariabell greatly complicate the plot.

Wit Endures Play
This play is considered by many the high water mark of Restoration comedy, it is, in any event, one of the masterpieces of English dramatic literature. The prose style is dazzling and the wit brilliant.

Restoration comedy is often attacked as being immoral. Is 'The Way of the World' characterized by immorality?

The production will be given Nov. 19 and 20.

HPC Students Teach In Local Schools
"These weeks student teaching have meant more to me than all the education courses in the world!" "One realizes more than ever that kids are not just characters in a book, but they are real human beings." Such are the comments of two student teachers.

Two times a year High Point College students are sent out into area schools to try out their latest techniques in learning.

Student teachers from HPC have been placed mostly in the High Point and Thomasville City school systems. Others, however, found themselves in Guilford, Davidson, and Randolph County schools.

Student teachers sometimes experiment with their pupils but this year some of the teachers themselves are being used as guinea pigs in a new program. Team teaching is the latest innovation in the education department. Sending students out into the schools in pairs is still in the trial stage, although much optimism for the success of this program is expressed.

Why should you pay $6 for this Moss Shirt when you can buy one that looks just like it for $8.95?

Because this Moss Shirt is just as traditional as the best of them. In every carefully executed detail. With some very persuasive extras like seven buttons instead of six to insure a flat, smooth front. And a collar that fits right in where the edging girls can’t pull off. Of course, a saving of $3.00 won’t make you a millionaire, but who knows, maybe you can use it. One shirt you see here is a founder. In a slightly mad plaid slant that looks like Irish than Mexican. It is perfectly matched all over. In a knock ‘em dead color combinations. About $5.00.

Junior Representative Wins Crown

Impressions From The Miss Golden Decade Pageant

BY SHARON OLIVER

Miss Sherry Donrose Snow, representative of the junior class in The Miss Golden Decade Contest held Dec. 3, became the first Miss Golden Decade of 1966. In all her radiant glory, Miss Snow stood before the audience in Memorial Auditorium with a very surprised but proud countenance.

First and second runners-up were Misses Omorga Waldrep, representing Kappa Delta Eternity and Miss Bev Albright, representing the sophomore class, respectively.

"I'm not nervous, after dinner I just put my right glove on my left hand. "Somebody just tells me 'I'm beautiful.' "What do I do with this door knob?" This lip-stick is dotted in the corner of my eyelid. Your zipper broke." "Are you kidding me," queried our new Miss Golden Decade back stage before evening gown competition.

Following the introduction of the contestants, Miss Nancy Taylor sang "Try to Remember" from the "Fantasticks," accompanied by Jim Sloan.

Seeing all the contestants together in their gowns, the judges were as follows: Mrs. Harold Conrad, Dean of the College; Miss Adele Gavigan accompanied by Omorga as she sang "House of the Rising Sun." So much feeling and expression came from this song that the young and inexperienced present especially enjoyed it due to the story of the song.

Bev brought forth a combination of dialogue and song. She told of her experiences at Camp Tekoa, a Methodist youth camp, this past summer and of the particular thing she enjoyed most which was singing around the campfire at night. She sang one of her favorite songs "He's Got the Whole World in His Hands."

Intermission which followed talent competition gave not only the girls a chance to be relieved, but also of one of the girls, "I can think about Christmas, now," the judges individually in her gown, the judges in this particular phase, watched for grace and poise as each contestant walked across the stage.

Miss Waltrep wore a beige and white gown with an empire waist while Miss Albright wore a white dress also with the very popular empire waist.

Miss Snow wore a beautiful white gown with sequins and spaghetti straps.

Preceding the talent competition, Pat Whiethoven and coeds, Miss Webb, both freshmen at H.T.C., provided more entertain ment while changes were being made back stage.

The song by Miss Whitlow and Mr. Webb was one entitled "Ah! Vou, Ah Mee," a story of a father, mother and their son.

During talent competition Sherry presented a dramatic reading from the Greek Tragedy, "Medea," with magnificent expression. The audience could perceive Medea's lack of sanity when she killed her children because she didn't love them as much as she hated her husband, Jason.

Dick Noble and Rich Wagner accompanied Omorga as she sang "The Whole World In His Hands."

The audience strained to listen and there was absolute silence. Miss Omorga Louise Waldrep, representing the freshman class, was the three names heard.

After a vast round of applause each contestant was given the question. Called upon first was Bev. Her question was as follows: "Sherry, what do you consider to be the three most valuable personal qualities and why?" First of all, I value my parents for without them I would not have been here tonight. Secondly, I value my education. Following Miss Waldrep was asked what she thought to be the most important characteristics a person can have. Omorga Louise Waldrep said" One must have faith in order to experience the story of the song."

"That big decision as to who would win this contest came from this song that the young and inexperienced present especially enjoyed it due to the story of the song."

At the annual Christmas Dance sponsored by the Student Government Association, the Chris- mass dance on December 10, featu red Maurice Williams and the Zodiacs. The dance was held at the Moose Lodge located on North Main Street. Since the dance was limited to High Point College students and their dates, I.D. cards were presented at the door.

Maurice Williams was backed by his own band of five members. The group has had two national hit recordings including "Stay" and "Do You Believe?"

Their first recording of "Stay" has sold over a million copies and has been re-recorded by such groups as the Four Seasons.

Both the SGA and the Entertainment committee went to great lengths to make the Christmas dance a success. Everyone had an enjoyable time.

The audience supported the dance well. The Freshmen had to make early arrangements with superiors to get rides to and from the dance.

The doors began at 8 P.M. and was over officially at 12:30 PM. All girls had one o'clock permis sion.

Dress for the Dance was informal. Refreshments were served.

Maurice Williams, backed by the Zodiacs, was featured last night at the annual Christmas Dance, sponsored by the SGA.
Should Students Have Say About Quality Instruction?

By GEORGE ROYcroft

Since students alone consume the offerings of the classroom, should they not be entitled to have their say in the instruction? College students at various colleges of learning across the country are engaged in grading the teachers for effectiveness, knowledge, and personality. Naturally not all the instructors are as well thought of, but many are. In a few institutions teachers may even find that their jobs depend upon how their students evaluate them.

The grade-the-teachers idea is in part a response to the growing dissatisfaction of college students with certain aspects of mass education. Complaints are made in many universities about over-sized classes, about instructors teaching courses while professors bury themselves in research, and about the faceless mob on the impersonal campus.

To meet these complaints many university officials are encouraging students to evaluate the quality of their education.

At Yale University honor students write their appraisals of courses and professors immediately after graduation.

Harvard professors and courses are rated unofficially by editors of the "Cambridge Daily" in a catalogue of candid comments based on a random polling of students.

A similar appraisal system was published at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, it sold 7,000 copies last year.

This system of evaluation is not found on the large university campus alone. At nearby Wake Forest students are continuing efforts to establish a course evaluation program after having had several proposals rejected by the faculty.

The present plan being considered by Wake Forest students and faculty has two major provisions.

Firstly, a professor would be required to furnish prospective students a written description of the course, including the amount of reading, the type and number of tests, and the course's practical application.

The second would require every student who completed a course to submit a confidential evaluation form to the professor. This form would be seen only by the professor and would tell him what the student thought of his teaching and the course.

But to some it seems questionable to whether these attempts to grade the professors are anything more than a popularity poll.

College instruction can hardly be limited to a contest since the most pleasing and conscientious teacher is not always the best.

The best instruction seems to run in two rather different extremes.

There is the natural teacher who has an all-consuming desire to make his closed minds absorb and impart knowledge. He is kind. He listens to whatever his students have to say regarding his course. He makes his subject alive and shares his enthusiasm with his students. He is an actor, an author, or a preacher; most good teachers are.

There is the other type whose very name strikes terror to the bone. His course is "impossible," and he is a variable "tyrant." In the classroom he assails students with a verbal whip lash of sarcasm and threat. The shy student writes home about him. The dull despises him. The bright student trembles and somehow survives.

Who is better? The Gallup Poll shows the Mr. Chips type in every country, the Dracula type, a holy terror. Yet, how often does it seem that they are the ones in unforgettend.

Yet, to whom can this problem be better attributed? Does the student have a solution in the educational method of the professor, in the attitude of the student, or in a combination of both of these?
A Coward Dies A Thousand Deaths, A Hero Dies But One

It is a damp and dreary a.m. Joe College lies smugly in his bed. G. I. Joe pulls himself out from under his thin blanket and cold beans, G. I. Joe prepares his breakfast. He offers little more than a grunt. He reaches over and slams off the alarm. Dread! Another day of this crummy life. I can't face it. This is madness getting through an empty day of this crummy life. I can't

If one sleeps through breakfast, Joe College takes his place in the cafeteria line — the longest one which gives him more time to gripe about the food. As he slams down his tray, he surveys its contents with disgust — milk, salad, bread, butter, meat, two vegetables, dessert, rolls. How could a bird live on that?

As the last, he finishes a can of cold beans, G. I. Joe prepares himself for what may come. Does he check and recheck his equipment, a cigarette, a prayer, smokes and prays. His ears capture every sound expectantly, waiting for something. Falling in line again, he continues in his journey. G. I. Joe College maintains his worthless day. He gets out of it what he puts into it — less than little. The day is timed, measured by meals, finished with relief. But was it worth the effort? The heat is intense, the heavy silence terrifying. Suddenly the silence is broken. An amphibian team sets off a land mine. Nowhere to run to, nowhere to hide. Only cold clammy death looking you in the face. Someone is running towards you. He's firing. It's either him or him, you, too. With every death its you. With every death its you or him. It's him. But it's you or him. It's you. You should go into it. A survey

In some parts of the country Christmas not so long ago, and now only some of these ideals exist.

Many families today spend the holiday traveling or partying during the entire season. Families have split traditional ideas of Christmas along with contemporary ideas of the modern age.

In some parts of the country artificial trees are decorated and adorned with expensive ornaments and gifts which the members of the family really cannot afford.

Other families open gifts on Christmas Eve and leave the day of peace as "nothings day." Still other families to whom the tradition has yet lingered find peace and joy in welcoming Santa Claus to their home living rooms to visit with them on Christmas Day as they share their gifts of the season. Children sing in small and meaning full ways.

Yes, Christmas remains the holiday for the people to reconcile and uphold peace and goodwill.

Has Spirit Of Christmas Lost Old Fashioned Flavor?

By CAROL RESCH

Christmas is the holiday of fine candies, old fashioned fire trees lit up with candles, brightly glowing fires, red holly and green mistletoe, snow and snow-crown, the big family gatherings, and gifts for all from good-old Saint Nicholas or the Americanized Santa Claus.

This was America's ideal of Christmas not so long ago, and now only some of these ideals exist.

Teacher Education Assumes More Importance At HPC

"More than 50% of all our graduates," declared Dr. Dennis Cooke, Director of Teacher Education for High Point College, "have become teachers in school systems across the country." The college has graduated 4,511 students since it opened its doors in 1924, which means that approximately 3,045 of these are engaged in the teaching profession. As Dr. Wendell M. Patton, during commencement exercises this summer when the first two students graduated with the ABT degree, stated, "As far as we can determine, High Point College is the only college in North Carolina who is offering this degree."

This teacher education program was introduced into the curriculum in 1964 in order to provide better qualified teachers who meet the new State Board of Education requirements. The program is offered in five areas: Art Education, Business Education, Elementary Education, Music Education, and Physical Education.

As a professional teacher degree program, the college provides specialized required core courses for teachers in the five areas, which were chosen because of the special requirements made by the state in these areas.

The university decided to teach on the high school level in other major fields will still work toward the bachelor of arts degree, but they also take the same number of hours of education courses required by the State Board of Education.

"At present," said Dr. Cooke, "High Point College is beset with request for teachers in Elementary Education by a ratio of 4 to 1. The pay scale for elementary teachers is on the same level with secondary education, but at present, the college can not meet the demands for elementary teachers."

Students going into teaching begin taking a core curriculum designed specifically for teachers. As freshmen, the students complete many of the general requirements which every student must take. As sophomores, the teacher core courses are begun as well as the completion of general requirements.

In the latter part of the sophomore year, the students take education courses and are tested as to teacher qualification. Besides completing the education courses, begin work on their majors and complete their core courses. During the senior year, the prospective teacher finishes the major area of study and participates in supervised student teaching.

"The major advantage to this type of program," stated Dr. Cooke, "is that the planned curriculum and testing allows the student to begin preparation for a teaching career much earlier, while working all the requirements for the teaching profession." stated Dr. Cooke.

As an indication of the excellence of the teacher education program at the college, the professional honor society in education, Kappa Delta Pi invited and initiated an HPC Chapter into its organization in the Spring of 1965.

Publication Advertisers Request Commission

Advertising managers of the Hi-Fo and Zenith sought pay for their staffs at the meeting of the Faculty committee on Publication Advertising.

Joe McNulty and Mr. J. H. Killinger, advertising managers of the Hi-Fo and the Zenith respectively, presented a bill to the committee asking that each member of the advertising staffs be paid ten per cent of his gross sales. This represents an increase of 4.4 per cent.

The bill also asked for a one per cent commission of all gross advertising for each semester paid to the advertising managers.

Frenzy, Chaos Prevail
Before Xmas Vacation

By JEANINE COTTRELL

Exactly how many days until Christmas vacation? Almost any student on the campus can immediately respond with 8!

The atmosphere of the campus just prior to a vacation is completely different from any other time of the year. An air of chaos and excitement prevails.

A typical girl's room is a mass of presents and new clothes for the holidays. She has calendars wall-to-wall, counting the days. She is tediously trying to plan each day of her vacation to make the most of her short stay at home.

She then makes a list of each article of clothing which she is going to take with her. After writing 4 pages she decides she must cut down. Six suitcases will never do!! But with each attempt she only recalls more things she has omitted.

She gives up on the list and goes to listen to Christmas carols while playing the inevitable game of bridge.

Professors have piled an unsurmountable amount of homework on the student which must be completed before the vacation begins. The student leaves this until the last 3 days before vacation then rushes madly to the library. He tries to get all of his studying done, the gifts purchased, and his things packed in just 3 days.

He scratches his head and ponders — "But it seems like I had 8 days, just the other day!"

Day Students Unaware of HPC
Campus Privileges, Responsibilities

Campus Day Students are generally unaware of their privileges and responsibilities, according to a recent survey of several day students.

When asked about the Day Student association, one Asheboro sophomore replied, "What is it?"

There are 453 day students registered for this semester, according to Registrar N. P. Yarborough. Each one has representation in the Student legislature and on the Judiciary council.

SGA Provides for Council

The Constitution of the Student Government Association provides for a Day Student council that consists of a president, vice president, secretary, and treasurer. Also provided in the Constitution of the SGA is that the president of the Day Students be a member of the Student legislature and that two members of the Judiciary council be elected from the Day Students.

But what could the Day Students' organization do? It could sponsor dances, banquets, or teas for its members.

"The Day Students could have their own intramural teams in volleyball, basketball, or softball," said Wanda Howlett, sophomore physical education major.

With interested support from its members, the Day Student association can become an active part of HPC campus life.

High Point’s Purple Panthers once again have shown their superiority on the hard wood floors by having won five games this season.

The first victim to feel the mighty Panthers’ claws was the Pfeiffer Falcons. The Pheasants were lost to High Point with a score of 55-77. The Panther victory was attributed to the fine playing of freshmen Eugene Littles and John Davis, sophomore Steve Tagtenhorst, and seniors Bill McDermott and Bill Green.

Half Moves Slowly

The first half moved rather slowly as compared to the usual play of the Panthers. Holding a lead of seven points at half-time and keeping the lead throughout the game provided the 2,000 spectators with a slow, but victorious opening home game.

High Point continued on its winning ways by defeating Campbell College 96-51, and Newberry College 95-38. In both games freshman guard Gene McDermott, Bill Green, Chris Lindsay, Jim Pitchai, and Ron Loewenthal.

The Panthers suffered their first defeat of the season Thursday, in a thrilling game against the Catawbas.

The game was thrown into overtime at the end of the second half with a tied score of 73-73. During overtime the Canes moved inside, ahead, scoring 12 points for a final victory of 80-77. The Panther victory was attributed to the teamwork of 35 points. Delta Sigma Phi finished second with 30 points, followed by Pi Kappa Alpha, Alpha Phi Omega, Lambda Chi Alpha, and Tau Kappa Epsilon respectively.

Theta Chi is in the lead with an overall point standing of 145 points. Delta Sigma Phi has 90 points. Pi Kappa Alpha 90, Alpha Phi Omega 85, Lambda Chi Alpha, and Tau Kappa Epsilon 80.
